CROWD GREETS STAR AS HE REACHES NEW YORK IN A 'FIGHTING MOOD'

New York, Jan. 14.—Charlie Chaplin, the king of film comedy, arrived in New York on the Twentieth Century Limited today and told reporters that he would fight his wife's suit for a divorce "to the bitter end."

He said the action brought by Lita Grey Chaplin in Los Angeles was instigated by his wife's family.

"I'm going to fight this thing out," he asserted. "I'm going to fight for the custody of my two children."

Chaplin resented the bringing of the name of Edna Purviance, noted screen actress, into his domestic difficulties.

"Certainly she's on my payroll."

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.—The possibility that they may be drawn into the Charles Chaplin divorce case hung over the heads of "five prominent motion picture actresses" today.

Lyndol K. Yount, counsel for the screen star's estranged wife, declared his client was prepared to furnish the names of the five women she referred to in her divorce petition as having "publicly and privately" associated with Chaplin.

Thus far the names have not come out, but they will be produced Young said if they are demanded either by the court or by Chaplin's lawyers.

11-MAN-JURY VERDICT UPHELD BY FULL BENCH
An 11-man-jury trial verdict was upheld in a decision handed down today by the full bench of Supreme Court. The case was that of Richard Lawless, who in Superior Court was found guilty of a misdemeanor. After the jury was impaneled one of the members showed he was disqualified and was excused. The defendant agreed to go on with 11 men, but after the verdict his counsel considered the court did not have jurisdiction in that the law required 12 men on a jury.

SUNDAY SPORTS BILL BEFORE LEGISLATURE

Judge Edward Logan of South Boston today filed a bill with the Legislature advocating baseball and other Sunday sports in Massachusetts. The judge, who was wartime colonel of the 101st, filed his bill after interviewing clergymen and citizens throughout the State, and finding, he says, that sentiment was in favor of Sunday sports.

The idea of a legislative drive to permit big league baseball in Boston on Sunday was taken up when a petition asking for referendum on the last State ballot was thrown out by the Secretary of State because of technical errors.

Thousands of names above the required number had been secured and backers of the proposition were sanguine of success. A number of ministers and civic association heads urged a legislative effort, and persuaded Judge Logan to act as their representative.

DR. WALSH AGAIN SLIPS THROUGH POLICE TRAP

By BERT FORD.

New York, Jan. 14.—Dr. Thomas E. Walsh of Boston, who has been a fugitive from justice since his default, December 16 in connection with the death of Edith Greene, a State ward, was sought in this city today by two Boston police inspectors.

The trail led to an apartment in Harlem which was searched in every nook and cranny without result. Inspectors George Augusta and E. S. Joyce were hustled here as a result of confidential information furnished to Boston police headquarters and to District Attorney William J. Foley.

The tipster reported that Dr. Walsh was in hiding in a certain suite in the apartment house at No

SURPRISE TESTIMONY AIDS 'POLICE SLUGGER'

A surprise was sprung today at the trial of Patrolman Leon M. Randall, charged with causing the death of John J. Ramsay of Roxbury, when Lieutenant George A. Mahoney, who booked Ramsay and who was one of the witnesses for the government, testified in Superior Court that Ramsay told him he had fallen down on his way home.

Another admission favorable to the defense by a government witness, was that of Russell Peel, manager of the Tumble Inn Lunch cart, from which Ramsay and his companion were ejected by Patrolman Randall on the night of December 4. The government contends he was injured when ejected from the lunch cart.

Peel testified that he was unable to identify Randall as the officer.

Lieutenant Mahoney, when asked by Assistant District Attorney McDonell if he had had any conversation with Ramsay on the night he was arrested, said: "Yes, I asked him if he had been in a fight. He said he had not. I asked him if he was assaulted by anyone. He said

MUNICIPAL GAS BILL IS FILED BY M'GLUE

A bill designed to make it possible for many cities and towns in Massachusetts to establish municipal gas and electric plants was filed today with the Legislature by Charles H. McGlue, chairman of the Democratic State Committee.

It provides for the removal of certain legal restrictions which now prevent these communities from acquiring plants for public operation.

"Enough evidence was presented at the meeting of the Ruler Committee yesterday to show to what extent the people of this State are being mulcted by the privately-owned companies," said Chairman McGlue.

"If the 43 municipal lightiest plants can produce electricity at almost one-half the private price, [illegible] every municipality should have opportunity to enter the lighting field.

"Under present law a city cannot acquire a municipal plant without having the City Council pass an order by two-thirds vote for two consecutive years and then have it adopted by a majority of the voters.

"I have provided, in my bill, for procedure based on the initiative and referendum, making it possible to place the question on the ballot.

12 ESCAPE AS FIRE SWEEPS TENEMENTS

Twelve persons, including seven small children, escaped from smoke and flame today in the tenement at No. 42-46 G street, South Boston, largely through the quick action and heroism of a man and woman.

Discovering fire in their section of the two-and-one-half-story wooden house, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Shea together carried out their three children and assisted out Mrs. Alice Russell, mother of Mrs. Shea.

They sounded the alarm and then gave the warning to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Ammanatas and four children in the other half of the house. Damage was estimated at $3,000, the firemen having a stiff fight for more than two hours. An overheated furnace is believed to have been the cause.

The Shea children are Mary, eighteen months; John, six, and Gertrude, three.

me. I asked him how he happened to have blood on his ear. He replied that he was drunk and that he fell down."

When asked as to the condition of Ramsay, the lieutenant replied: "I should say he was drunk."

After the assistant district attorney had asked several other questions, Attorney Maurice Caro for the defendant interrupted and said: "You cannot cross-examine your own witness."

Dr. William J. Sheehan, police physician, recalled to the stand after he had told of finding that Ramsay had a fractured skull and that in his belief Ramsay had liquor in him at the time of being booked, was asked about the conversation that Lieutenant Mahoney had with Ramsay and his appearance at the time. Dr. Sheehan said Ramsay appeared to answer the officer's questions clearly and rationally.

The first witness of the day was Medical Examiner Timothy Leary, who testified that bronchial pneumonia and septic poisoning following a fractured skull caused Ramsay's death in City Hospital on Dec. 16. This injury, the government contends, was caused when Ramsay was ejected from the lunchroom.

NOONAN PLEADS GUILTY OF LARCENY FROM WOMAN

Henry T. Noonan, who has been on trial in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court, charged with larceny from Mrs. Anna Quinn Sterling of Somerville, pleaded guilty today to two charges of larceny. The case was continued to Tuesday for disposition. The case was in its second day of trial and was being heard by Judge Wilfred Gray and a jury.

It was claimed Noonan falsely led Mrs. Starling to believe him to be an attorney and secured deeds to her property. He was charged with mortgaging the property and the larceny of $8,750.

TWO HELD FOR HEARING IN HOUSE FIRES

Harry Devoe and Glendon Cheatham, who were in Roxbury Court today charged with maliciously burning two Roxbury apartment houses, asked for a hearing, and the case was continued until January 24. The men were held in $10 000 each.

It is alleged that on the night of January 7 Cheatham fired the building at No. 107 Townsend street. Devoe is charged with a similar offence on January 12 at No. 105 Townsend street. Both pleaded not guilty.

Devoe was formerly the janitor at one of the addresses, according to testimony presented, and Cheatham was his assistant.

John E. Reardon, from the State fire marshal's office, told the court that he had evidence that Cheatham had made threats at one time when Devoe was ordered to discharge him.

Both men are suspected of being implicated in the series of fires that have broken out in Roxbury during the past week, police say.

On Wednesday night there were three buildings burned.

351 West 141st street. Inspectors Augusta and Joyce made their first visit last night and a second one shortly after midnight aided by two New York inspectors.

NO TRACE OF FUGUTIVE.

The apartment house is in the negro district and occupied entirely by negro tenants. Inspector Boyden learned that white men had been seen visiting the apartment house.

The fact that Dr. Walsh lived for years on the edge of the negro colony in the South End of Boston was thought promising by the New York officers.

Curiously in the apartment stipulated, near the top of the six story building, they found "Dr." H. H. Thomas, who admitted that he had been arrested a year ago in Boston in connection with his practice.

The police found surgical instruments in the apartment and books and mail belonging to "Dr." Thomas. Inspector Joyce recognized a young man in a bedroom as Thomas, a former resident of the South End of Boston.

The Boston and New York inspectors decided on a surprise visit at an early hour today, which proved fruitless.

SEEKS TO STRIP FULLER OF PAY CONTROL

Calling unconstitutional the control exercised by Governor Fuller and other officials over salaries of State employes Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin today began work on a bill designed to take this power at least temporarily, from the administrative officers.

Goodwin also hopes to get before the Legislature a report on salaries, made by an expert, which he declares shows that a "rank injustice has been done to the employes of the State as a whole."

This report is the so-called Griffenhagen report for which the Legislature appropriated $50,000. Goodwin wants the Legislature to take it up, "free from interference by Gov. Fuller, the Executive Council and the Commission on Administration and Finance."

Speaking as acting president of the Commonwealth Service Association, the "union" of State employes, the registrar urged the classification of civil officers and fixing of salaries by the Legislature.

"Under the constitution of Massachusetts full power and authority is given the General Court in this matter," he said.

"To all intents and purposes the Legislature has delegated this power to the Governor because he controls the action of the Department of Administration and Finance. This is obnoxious to the spirit of our constitution, for it was intended that the Governor should have the veto power only."

The mayor's oldest son read in the papers that he had to go to the hospital for an operation and sat down at the typewriter to tell the Boston public how it feels to be sick when you don't know it.

READS PAPERS AND FINDS OUT HE IS SICK

I read in the papers that I got to go to the hospital. First I he- I of it. Funny you got to read things in the papers to find out about yourself.

I didn't know I was sick, that's the funniest part of it. The fellers at school all asked me why I was going to the hospital, 'cos they said I didn't look sick. Don't feel sick, neither.

The fellers say I'm just looking for a vacation. They're just jealous.

I told the fellers to read the papers and see if I wasn't really sick. The papers said I got adenoids. That's one good thing about the papers, they learned me how to spell a big word like adenoids.

KNOWS ABOUT ADENOIDS.

Papers said I got sinus sickness, too, whatever that is.

I know what adenoids is, 'cos I asked daddy and he said it is something that lots of boys have in their nose that makes them snore. Didn't know I snored, neither, until the newspapers said so.

I asked some of the fellers at school about adenoids and they all said it was something that goes with tonsils, 'cos some of them had both of them at once. They never heard of sinus sickness, though. Daddy didn't know much about sinus neither. He said sinus makes headaches.

The fellers that was in the hospital all said that it was nice there. They said they liked it, 'cos the

CONVICT TAKEN IN SHACKLES TO CHELSEA TRIAL

Manacled to a prison guard, Percy Friedman was taken from State Prison to Chelsea City Hall today to testify as "star" witness against Patrolman Thomas J. Quigley, brother of ex-Mayor Quigley, and Sergeant Edward W. Isbester.

Both Quigley and Isbester were suspended by the new mayor, John J. Whalen, for conduct unbecoming officers. They are under sentence of 18 months for violation of the prohibition law, but while awaiting action on appeals they were retained on the police force by ex-Mayor Quigley.

Friedman was led into the hearing chamber at City Hall through a crowd that gathers in the corridors. The hearing was held in a room adjoining the mayor's office and this was filled to overflowing.

He was brought from the prison on a habeas corpus write issued by Judge Foedick in Superior Court at the request of Mayor Whalen.

Excitement was at high pitch as the hearing began, the mayor's "clean-up" administration, bringing with it at the start the wholesale discharge of "superfluous" city employes having created a sensation. Many witnesses were present to testify both for and against the suspended policemen.

ONE TRAIL LEADS TO LOWELL

Boy Burglar Who Admitted 50 Breaks Makes Thrilling Escape in Providence

Providence, Jan. 14 (I.N.S.).—"The gorilla" had baffled police and detective forces of three States today in their frantic efforts to capture him.

Felix Lamake, 16, is the "Gorilla," that name being applied to him by police.

A total of fifty-seven daring burglaries, most of them in women's boudoirs and marked by remarkable agility on the part of the thug, were credited to Lamake before he was captured and sent to State prison at Howard.

He blackened his face with burnt cork as a disguise for some of his thrilling exploits.

Late yesterday "the Gorilla" stole the keys to a ladder shed, climbed to the top of a twenty-two foot prison wall, swung the ladder over the top, walked carefully by two dozing guards, and got down the other side of the wall to safety. The guards—William Allen and Everett R. Smith—were discharged.

ON GUARD IN LOWELL

An intensive hunt for "the Gorilla" was imediately underway. His description was broadcast by radio, New York steamships were searched and railroad stations were watched.

A guard was placed at the homes of the "Gorilla's" relatives in Lowell, Mass., and here, railroad detectives searched trains between Providence and New London, Ct.

State patrols of Rhode Island, Connecticut and Massachusetts watched automobile traffic, posses scoured the woods, all Rhode Island hunted "the gorilla," but all to no avail.

A youth early this morning jumped from a train near New London, Ct., but got away. Police, however, think that "the gorilla" is under cover here.

ASTONISHING FEATS.

After his arrest Lamake confessed to astonishing recklessness in his burglaries. Surprised in a woman's boudoir, he did not hesitate to dive headforemost out of the window.

He reached the second-story window by climbing trellises and frame-work. Fleet of foot and agile, he leaped high fences and darted away from pursuers.

For months "The Gorilla" ran circles around Providence police. Discovered on several occasions, the youth dazzled his would-be captors with the light from his flashlight and then jumped to safety like an acrobat.

He worked alone and money was what he was after, all jewelry taken in his robberies being found in his home.

"The Gorilla" was finally tracked down by Patrolman Joseph A. Colleman, who, disguised as an underworld character, got an introduction to the daring sixteen-year-old thug.

$300,000 TO GO TO REDMOND CREDITORS

The assets of the bankrupt brokerage firm of George F. Redmond & Co., Inc., $30,000 in all, were secured to creditors of the estate by a ruling handed down in Federal District Court today by Judge Elisha H. Brewster.

That sum was endangered by a suit brought by the local Bureau of Internal Revenue against the Redmond estate for additional taxes of $226,000 on the income of the company through the years 1919-21.

In deciding against the government, Judge Brewster upheld the opinion of Referee in Bankruptcy Black, who denied the claim of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

The opinion of the referee, sustained by Judge Brewster, declared the lain of the government was based solely upon an estimate admitted to be incorrect and obviously wide of the mark.

"In my view," Referee Black continued in his statement to the court, "it is not a tax on income but a levy on finds entrusted to the bankrupt by its unfortunate victims.

"If allowed it will practically wipe out the assets of the estate and will result in a virtual confiscation by the government of the small fund salvaged by creditors from their own money.

"Such a result would beshocking to justice and common sense."

Heflin Charges K. of C. Works for War of U. S. With Mexico

Washington, Jan. 14.—President Coolidge's policy in the Nicaraguan and Mexican situations was again attacked today in both Houses of Congress.

Senator La Follette, Republican, Wisconsin, in his first speech of the session, said he regarded "the action of our government in Nicaragua as unjustified and unobjectionable."

Attacking the action of Secretary Kellogg in presenting a document to show Mexico is the base of Bolshevist propaganda aimed at the United States La Follette said this was the only part of the proceedings of the foreign relations committee given to the public and that the only inference was Kellogg wanted it to go to the country as a justification for the administration's policy in Central America.

"BULLYING" SAYS DILL.

The United States is "acting the part of a big bully," said Senator Dill (D) of Washington, adding: "I do not propose to sit silent without protest against a policy that might involve us in a conflagration over land laws in Mexico, which the government of that country has offered to arbitrate."

Referring to Nicaragua, he declared that "precedent is no defense for a wrong action," and that "the people of the United States have no sympathy, in my judgment, with a policy which presumes to tell the people of Nicaragua they must have the kind of government we want them to have."

The religious issue was raised by Senator Heflin, Democrat, of Alabama, for the first time in this controversy.

He charged that the first attempt to bring about "war between the United States and Mexico" was launched at the Knights of Columbus convention in Philadelphia in August, 1926, when they passed a resolution and raised a million dollars for propaganda.

TELLS OF "THREATS"

Heflin said he had received a letter warning him that a "chain of Catholic papers had been tipped off to go after Heflin.

"They are against me because I declared against Al Smith for President," he said.

Heflin then charged that "certain influences" sought to "bribe Woodrow Wilson into a war with Mexico" when he was a candidate for re-election in 1916.

"A few days before the election in 1916," said Heflin, "President Wilson was approached by certain ecclesiastical officials who urged him to declare war on Mexico. President Wilson wanted to fix into the matter but he was pressed for an answer. The situation became acute two or three days before the election and if it had not been for the State of California, Wilson would have been defeated."

In the House Representative Moore, Democrat, Virginia, introduced a resolution to go on record that there is "nothing in the Mexican situation to justify severance of our diplomatic relations" with that government or forcible intervention in its affairs. The agitation in favor of any such course is no less than a criminal effort to substitute a state of war for the present peaceful condition," said the resolution. It was referred to the foreign affairs committee of which Moore is a member.

"It is, of course, not to be supposed that the President desires trouble with Mexico," said Moore in a statement, "but the very severe references to that country in his Nicaraguan message can but serve to stimulate the propaganda which has the definite purpose of bringing about intervention.

DEFENDS MEXICO.

"The government of Mexico seems to be arraigned for recognizing Sacasa as President of Nicaragua instead of Diaz, and for allowing arms and munitions to be furnished the former. But Mexico has the same right to recognize and countenance the assistance of Sacasa as the United States had to recognize and countenance the assistance of Diaz."

Representative Eaton, Republican, New Jersey, made a general defense of the Coolidge policy in Latin-America and asked his colleague directly whether they proposed to stand "for the President of the United States or the President of Mexico."

Methodists Implore Coolidge to Avert Break With Mexico

Chicago, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Telegrams to President Coolidge and Senator Deneen of Illinois, urging that there be no severing of diplomatic relations with Mexico but that any differences between the two governments be referred to the Hague for arbitration, were sent today by five leaders in Methodist Episcopal work here.

They include Dr. R. J. Wade, executive secretary of the World Service Commission of that denomination. All are connected with that communion but sent the telegrams as individuals. The telegrams read:

"Unthinkable that United States should sever diplomatic relations with Mexico. Earnestly urge Mexican controversy be referred for arbitration to Hague tribunal."

Mexicans Torture Captured Rebels

Mexico City, Jan. 14.—Charging upon the authority of an eye witness that prisoners were tortured before their execution, the newspaper Excelsior editorially demanded the Federal and State authorities terminate cruelties in connection with the repression of rebellious activities.

Under the heading "The Wave of Blood," the editorial said that the tongue of one prisoner was torn out after he had urged his comrades to call upon God.

The Excelsior editorial was one of the most violent appearing recently and follows similar criticism in the newspaper El Universal, warning against unwarranted severe measures of punishment for accused persons without proper trial.

The editorial cites a specific instance after the outbreak at Leon, alleging that five youths under 20 were seized, tortured and executed summarily without trial and their bodies later displayed at the municipal palace, producing many tragic scenes.

The newspaper asserts that the torture, consisted of the tongues of the youths being cut out.

Mexicans Use Planes to Defeat the Yaquis

Mexico City, Jan. 14 (Universal).—Attacking in force after a preparatory bombardment by airplanes which rained bombs and machine gun bullets on the enemy, Federal troops have taken the Yaqui stronghold Tecopobampo in the heart of the fertile "Valley of Death," where the Indians have taken many lives in the past four centuries of warfare.

An official report has been received by the War Department from General Manzo, chief of operations in the Yaqui campaign, which asserts that the Indians suffered the most severe losses, many being left on the battlefield after their defeat.

With President Calles expected to visit Sonora in February for a stay of a month, troops are making a record against the Yaquis before their chief's arrival.

NAVY ACADEMY "WORST SCHOOL," SAYS SIMS

Providence, Jan. 14 (A.P.)—"The Naval Academy at Annapolis is the worst school in the world," said Admiral W. S. Sims at a meeting of the Newport Discussion Club in the Y. M. C. A.. He explained his statements by asserting that they are not trying to turn out educated men, but merely naval officers.

Admiral Sims thought it would be a good idea if some of the college men, especially those who excelled in mathematics, were given special courses and made naval officers.

'GOOD WILL' AIR FLEET FLYING IN SECTIONS

Punta Arenas, Costa Rica, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Major Herbert A. Dargue's crippled flag-plane New York has advanced another notch down the Pacific coast of Central America in the 20,000-mile goodwill flight to South America and return.

Accompanied by the St. Louis, the New York arrived here at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon from Amapala, Honduras. The other three planes are remaining until tomorrow at Amapala.

Major Dargue stayed at Panama to pay courtesy visits in Honduras and Nicaragua.

appointed at the instance of Mrs. Chaplin had the books of the screen star under scrutiny today.

EQUAL DIVISION.

Mrs. Chaplin is seeking a share of the comedian's fortune, estimated in her suit to total $16,000,000. Of this amount, she declares, $10,000,000 is community property.

Under California law the wife is entitled to an equal division of the community property. However, Mrs. Chaplin's attorneys point out, that if her charges of extreme cruelty are proven, Chaplin is liable under the divorce laws of the State to be penalized to the extent of losing his share of community property.

W. J. Gilbert, one of the receivers, declared he intends to possess as much of the comedian's wealth as can be located before reporting to the court on the actor's financial condition.

TO SEARCH BANKS.

After an inspection of the comedian's ledgers, the receivers plan to call on banks in Los Angeles where Chaplin and his associates are known to have transacted business and search all deposit boxes rented by either the comedian, Al Reeves, his manager, or T. Kono, his secretary.

These boxes will be searched for possible additional securities. Receivership notices already have been served on the banks preventing the withdrawal of any of the actor's funds pending a settlement of the divorce suit.

Charlie Says Lita Is 'Very Cruel to Me!'

By SARAH BROWN
International News Correspondent

Aboard Twentieth Century Limited, En Route to New York, Jan. 14.—"She has been very cruel to me."

The man whom Lita Grey Chaplin is accusing of unfaithfulness and dozens of other startling abuses, sat in his drawing room on this train today, and, as he idly flipped a deck of cards in a game of solitaire, talked to me alone for over two hours.

"Cruel is the only word that expresses it," said Charlie Chaplin, as the cards slipped through his slender, delicate fingers and the landscape outside hurried by in a black blur while he discussed philosophy, life, religion, fate—and love.

WILL FIGHT ALL CHARGES

"I hate combat—I hate bickering and fussing," he said, "but now—now that such utterly vicious, viperous lies have been told about me—it's a case of standing with one's back to the wall and fighting it to a finish.

"Lita's action was so sudden and so unprovoked, the statements in her bill were terrible lies. When the time comes I can prove it. A man can't work night and day, writing, acting and directing, as I have done, and have time for all, even any of the things, she says I have done.

"That's why I say she's cruel to me. I have been patient with her and have done my best to make her happy. Why she would turn, and with such venom, do all the spiteful, vengeful things she has done I don't know.

He pushed the cards away from him suddenly, and the face which has made countless thousands laugh seemed suddenly very old, very tired and unspeakably sad.

WANTS A "REAL HOME."

"I can't tell you what a home—a real home and a family mean to me," he said. "A house filled with beautiful things is worse than nothing when you have to live in it by yourself. But to have a wife—a sympathetic comradely person, and children—to have that would be all I'd ask of life.

"Now—well, I've tried to make that dream come true. Perhaps that's the trouble with your most perfect dreams. They never come true.

"Do you know, I never had any real unhappiness until I became rich and successful. Cold—disappointment—despair. Those things are nothing compared to the staggering blows that hit you in the heart—hypocrisy, treachery and slander.

"Before I knew riches my friends took me for what I was. Now I can sometimes feel greedy fingers reaching for the gold they think I possess—which, by the way, is far from being sixteen millions of dollars. That's ridiculous."

Chaplin Will Not Face Deportation in Divorce Case

Washington, Jan. 14 (I.N.S.).—Charlie Chaplin, film comedian, will not be deported if his wife, Lita Grey, wins her divorce against him, Department of Labor officials said today. They denied reports from Los Angeles that immigration officials were watching the Chaplin case with a view to deporting him to England.

It was pointed out that in order to deport Chaplin, who is a British subject, it would be necessary for him to be convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude.

The divorce case, being a civil action, would not afford grounds for deportation, despite the serious charges it contains, officials said.

Copies of Chaplin Papers for 25 Cts. in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.—Enterprising printers here turned out several thousand copies of Lita Grey Chaplin's sensational divorce complaint, and the first edition was exhausted, at a price of 25 cents the copy, while the prints were still hot from the press.

A long line has filled for the past two days into the county clerk's office, each man and woman seeking an unabridged version of the spicy charges, contained in the 42-page document.

Maine Women Want All Chaplin Pictures Shown

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 14 (A.P.).—The Miami Beach Woman's Club has gone on record as petitioning local moving picture managers to show all pictures obtainable that feature Charlie Chaplin.

Mrs. Clayton Sedgwick Cooper, the club's president, in announcing this today said this action was taken to counteract what she termed "silly agitation which women's clubs have taken in regard to Chaplin pictures."

She said the Miami Beach society took the position that "the patrons of picture theatres will be the loser if Chaplin's films are barred."

CHAPLIN LANDS FIGHTING MAD IN NEW YORK

Chaplin said. "She's on the payroll for $250 a week, but that was the stipulation in her original contract.

"There was absolutely no reason for dragging Miss Furviance's name into this."

Chaplin did not seem as depressed as reports from the West indicated he was in Chicago yesterday. He smiled as he dropped off the train to face a horde of reporters and a battery of cameras. He posed amiably for pictures.

CROWD GREETS CHARLIE.

A large crowd gathered near the train, having learned of Chaplin's arrival. Charlie tried to make his way to a waiting automobile, but he was blocked by the reporters who shot questions at him.

In reply to one question Chaplin denied he is worth $16,000,000 or anything like that amount.

"Why," he declared, "I'm not worth one-half of six million dollars."

Chaplin characterized his wife's divorce action as "a money plot, pure and simple."

He said he intended to file a cross-bill just as soon as he got back to California.

Charlie is not going to allow his marital troubles to interfere with his art, he said. He is going to resume work upon his newest picture, "The Circus," and complete it.

The famous comedian was as dapper as ever as he stepped from the train. He wore a cream colored fedora hat and a broad cloth overcoat with an astrakan collar.

WANTS THOSE BABIES

A wan smile, as pathetic as that used in some of his pictures, hovered over Chaplin's face as the photographers rushed forward and began to request different positions for pictures.

Charlie talked to the reporters as he posed. He was asked first about his domestic troubles.

"I have seen my wife only once since she left my home with the children five weeks ago," said the comedian. "I visited her family to see my babies, but I did not say anything to my wife while I was there, nor did she say anything to me.

"I talked to the babies, but left shortly afterward because I could not stand the environment. I want the children for myself. They are not now with proper responsible people."

"I hate to bicker," he said, as he talked, slowly and with a touch of almost tragic pathos of the bill which has broken his heart.

"If I say now all the things that could be said, this whole terrible trouble would reach the stage of a public fair for scandal and I am too busy family brawl. And I am too busy and tried to stand that. I want to be as decent as possible about this—that's why I don't want to discuss it any further."

COUPLE WERE HAPPY.

However, those close to Chaplin, including his business manager, Arthur W. Kelly, did not hesitate to air their opinions more thoroughly.

"It's a shame," said Kelly, "and further—now, it's a put up job. The Chaplins were awfully happy together. Lita told me the last time I saw them that she loved children—she hoped they'd have seven. She said Charlie was an awful fine hand at babies.

"He's even taught little Charles, Jr., a lot of tricks—he can mimic and pantomime beautifully. This whole affair is terribly a bolt from the blue. I think there must have been considerable outside interference."

Chaplin denied he "ran away from California."

"I was not frightened," he said. "I came to New York for business reasons and as soon as I get through here I am going to return. I came here to consult my lawyer about the suit against The Pictorial Review and to close negotiations with the United Artists Company, my producers. I shall call upon Nathan Burkan, my lawyer, some time during the day."

The legal action mentioned by Chaplin is a suit for $500,000 damages, based upon a biography of the screen star written by Jim Tully. Chaplin admitted that he had been more or less closely associated with Tully for a year and a half, but had never authorized him to write a biography.

Charlie's chief objection to the life story was its statement that he had been down and out at one time—virtually a tramp.

"That story is not authentic—not true—not authorized," declared Chaplin.

Chaplin was accompanied by Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president and treasurer of the United Artists, Chaplin had reserved rooms at the Ambassador, but Kelly said he probably would stay at a private home.

7 FLEE HINGHAM FIRE; DAMAGE IS $10,000

The loss of seven persons were endangered and the four-story Colonial dwelling occupied by David Fiesher and family and Thomas Goad at his estate, Miss Marion Goad, in Lafayette avenue, Hingham, was destroyed by fire today. It caused the combined efforts of the Hingham fire forces and those of many towns to subdue the blaze which lasted five hours. Damage was estimated at about $10,000.

1300 GILCHRIST EMPLOYES AT STAFF DINNER

More than thirteen hundred employes of the Gilchrist Store, members of the Gilchrist Association, attended the annual dinner and town meeting conducted at the Chamber of Commerce Building when one of the most enthusiastic and delightful events in the history of the company was conducted.

From Felix Vorenberg, president of the Gilchrist Company, down to the humblest employe, everybody had the time of his life. After the dinner the entertainment was opened by the town crier, namely, Frank Walsh, head porter at the Gilchrist Store, who appeared in ancient town crier's costume.

A. E. Stevens, president of the Gilchrist Members' Association gave a report on the financial condition of the organization, which showed that the financial condition is excellent. It also showed that the various divisions, such as the clinic, cheer up committee, athletic committees and the various other committees affiliated with the association enjoyed the greatest year in their history.

Felix Vorenberg, president of the Gilchrist Company was given a tremendous ovation. He said that it was a pleasure to be affiliated with the association, and to be present at such a meeting filled his heart with joy. Mr. Vorenberg said the organization meant as much to him as it did to the other members. He spoke of the wonderful loyalty at the Gilchrist store, of the splendid co-operation given all the officials of the company by the 1300 odd employes.

He said 1926 for the Gilchrist company was a success in every way, and that he predicted another successful year for the organization. To give the employes a small idea of what a large institution of the Gilchrist store was, he declared that it cost $13,000 a day to run the Gilchrist store.

One of the individual features of the entertainment was the introduction of the new ten-piece Gilchrist Members' Association orchestra, led by Frank Sweeney. Only organized a few weeks, the orchestra was the hit of the program.

Robert H. Hearn, who has been in the employ of the Gilchrist company for 67 years and who is the oldest employe, was on hand for the party.

Sam Vorenberg, vice president of the company and merchandise manager at the store; Fred Vorenberg, treasurer; Charles Harvey, credit manager; Mrs. Susan Graham, sales manager; John J. Bulger, comptroller, were among the leading members of the organization present.

The entertainment given by the employes on the different floors was a success in every way. To Mrs. Gridde Pray of Medford, general secretary of the association, is due the credit for the success of the annual meeting.

PULLMAN CAN BAN NEGROES

Washington, Jan. 14 (A. P.)—An effort to collect damages from the Pullman Company for refusal to sell tickets to a negro, while at the same time such tickets were sold to white persons, failed today when the Interstate Commerce Commission held that the section of the law under which an action was brought could not be violated by such a refusal.

The Commission took the position that the refusal was not a discrimination under section two of the commerce act, since it did not involve any situation by which one person obtained transportation for less than another.

A complaint made by J. P. Harder, a negro lawyer of Chicago, seeking $25,000 damages from the Pullman Company on the ground that it refused to sell him accommodations was dismissed.

The Pullman Company, at the same time, denied that its agents or employes were ever authorized or instructed to refuse Pullman accommodations to negro passengers.

MARY HAY DIVORCED FROM BARTHELMESS

Paris, Jan. 14 (A. P.)—Mary Hay, motion pictures actress, has been granted a divorce from Richard Barthelmess, it was announced today, on the ground of her husband's injurious attitude" in closing the door of their home upon her.

OLD COLONY WORKERS DINE

The Old Colony Trust Company played host to nearly 900 of the employes and officials at its seventh annual "get-together" party at the Copley-Plaza. Almost every member of the firm's Boston offices and several officials of its New York branch sat at the dinner, which required the main ballroom, balconies and foyer.

The party was wholly informal, without the usual head table or speakers. A battle of music was staged between the 25-piece Copley-Plaza orchestra and 25 of Ray Stewarson's Dance Specialists. Between courses a varied vaudeville program was provided by "Jack and Bill" of the WEEI group of entertainers, Pietro Mordela with a gypsy troupe and others. Elliot Bowser led the party singing.

After the meal there was dancing. The annual reception by the directors was omitted, but in its stead an opportunity was afforded for an informal exchange of greetings before the dinner.

MANNING EMPLOYES PLAN WHIST PARTY

The Joseph P. Manning Company Employes' Association will have a benefit dance and whist party on Saturday evening at Whiton Hall, Dorchester, Miss Catherine P. Dyer, chairman, is ably assisted by Misses Mary H. Doian, Anna F. Kiley, Florence Z. McCarthy, Martha T. O'Connell and Rose Wise, and has received many beautiful whist gifts.

ANOTHER WAY OUT OF COMPULSORY TAX

Another bill looking to the repeal of the State compulsory automobile insurance law was filed today at the State House by John J. Murphy of Somerville. As a substitute, Murphy proposes the creation of a State fund to cover liability with an initial levy on automobile owners of ten dollars for each car registered.

WASHINGTON PICTURES PRAISED

Dr. Bogan

Dr. Frederick L. Bogan, chairman of the Boston School Committee, yesterday commented on the value of pictures in education, declaring the series of picturized incidents in the life of George Washington to begin in the Boston Evening American next Monday of great value. Four picturized incidents together with their authentic bits of history of the Father of His Country, will be run as an editorial feature of The Boston Evening American each evening for six weeks.

"Educators and teachers all over the world are realizing more and more the value of pictures in making a lasting impression on the minds of their pupils," declared Dr. Bogan. "Whether they be still pictures or motion pictures, they are of great value in teaching history, medicine, geography, health, or any other subject required in educational work of today.

"Picturized history is not wholly new, for the rocks of our own country still bear bits of history told in pictures by the Indians. In fact we can go anywhere in the world, delving among the ruins of ancient Mexico, or among the tombs of Egypt and we will find picturized history crudely told in stone and rock, carrying their messages down through the ages. Educators discovered long ago that a picture of an event in history or geography, and in fact any subject, will last long after the printed words are forgotten."

Dr. Bogan complimented the Boston Evening American in its selection of such a feature as the picturized incidents in the life of George Washington, the greatest figure in American history.

Nor are the thrills of this series depicting the life of Washington alone for the boys and girls of New England and their teachers; they are so well done that the grown-ups, the busy business man, the ministers, the lawyers, and, in fact, men and women in all walks of life, will find great pleasure in following the life of George Washington as the boy, the Indian fighter, the soldier, and the first President of the United States, and, at the end, agree that the series is worthy of preservation for future generations.

The series will surely begin next Monday in the Boston Evening American, running daily for six weeks.

'Guilty' Denies Killing Alton By Jean McDonough

THAT AFTERNOON WE WENT TO Davis' house. His little daughter showed us to her father's workroom. Davis came out in his shirt-sleeves. He scowled when he saw me. Charles told him that I had presented my evidence to the district attorney, and that the grand jury probably would indict him very soon. At this Davis looked up at me again as if to say something, but he didn't.

THEN WITHOUT DEIGNING TO LOOK at me, he turned to Charles. "Edwards," he said, "it sure looks bad for me. I wasn't home at the time of the murder. You know it's a habit of mine to take long walks, alone, late at night. I threatened him recently in her presence. I swore that I would get him if he didn't pay me—she probably knows that—but I tell you honestly I didn't kill Alton. You know that I wouldn't do a thing like that."

CHARLES TOOK DAVIS BY THE hand. A determined look came over his face. "Davis, I take your word as a man," he said. "I believe in you. I'm sure you didn't kill Alton—but the evidence is against you. I'm going to defend you, old man, because I feel sure you are telling me the truth." I was enraged at this. Charles had come here to question Davis and he hadn't done it. He had believed every word Davis said.

I COULD CONTROL MYSELF NO longer. "Davis," I cried, "if you were half the man Mr. Edwards thinks you are you'd own up. I know you're guilty and you do, too, and I'll see you convicted if it takes every cent of my father's fortune." Davis growled. "Will you be so good as to leave my house now, Miss Alton? I've seen all that I care to see of the Alton family." I turned to go, leaving Charles behind. (Continued tomorrow.)

GIRL CHARGES ABDUCTION AND MOCK BRIDAL

Declaring she was wooed by a man she thought to be single, and coaxed into what she believed was a marriage ceremony without the usual legal red tape, Miss Maude E. Hingley, 18-year-old Cambridge beauty, testified today against Harry R. Lord in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court. Lord is charged with abduction of Miss Hingley on Nov. 29, 1926.

She said they first met at a Cambridge garage last September and later went on an automobile ride to Pepperell. "During the ride," she testified, "he proposed marriage and I accepted. He told me a marriage license was not necessary as the ceremony would be by a justice of the peace."

In Pepperell they stopped at a house, she said, and a man whom Lord introduced as Frank Kearns, a justice of the peace, came out and asked them both if they were willing to marry. On the way back to Boston, Miss Hingley testified, Lord showed her a paper bearing the name of Kearns and which, he said "showed they were married."

Miss Hingley said she went home and after changing her clothes met Lord at a Boston hotel. Then, she said, she discovered Lord had been drinking and left him. The rest of her story had to do with telling her troubles to her friends, parents and the police.

AFRAID OF HER, HE SAYS.

Lord testified that he had been married seven years and was the father of two children. He told of making the acquaintance of Miss Hingley and of her calling him up on the telephone one night, saying she was lonesome and a lot of other "foolish stuff."

"She told me," Lord testified, "that she did not want to take a Peaches Browning chance." He said he was under her influence at all times and was afraid she would tell his wife. He admitted taking her on the automobile ride to Pepperell to pacify her, but denied going through any wedding ceremony. "She told me I'd be sorry in twenty-four hours if I didn't go with her," he said.

NO MATRIMONIAL PLUNGE FOR TIMSON AND 'TRUDY'!

Louis Timson of Lynn, swimmer par excellence, who is among the stars entered in the $40,000 Catalina swim, may be engaged to Gertrude Ederle, but if he is his sister-in-law doesn't think so.

When confronted with a revived rumor that Louis was about to team up with the internationally-famous channel conqueror, Mrs. George Timson, the sister-in-law, denied the story flatly.

"Louis told me in confidence that he was not considering matrimony for some years to come," she said. "I 2 months old, died today.

know he holds Miss Ederle as a very special friend, but that is all."

"No, he is not going to marry her, and that is definite," Mrs. Timson concluded.

Mrs. Charles A. Timson, mother of Louis, and his brother, George, are both touring in the South.

RUSSIANS GET ARMY IN SHAPE FOR WAR

Moscow, Jan. 13 (A.P.)—The general prevalence of war talk in Russia coincides with the registration today of all able-bodied men in the classes of 1893 to 1903 for possible military service.

Great Britain's openly unfriendly attitude to the Soviet, Poland's uncertain designs, the disquieting situation in Lithuania, America's policy of indifference to Moscow and other adverse signs on the bolshevik's horizon have given rise to increasing talk of war.

BRITON FINDS HUB MOSN ENGLISH OF U. S. CITIES

"Although Boston has been enormously enlarged in the last 30 years, it remains the least American and most English of all the big cities in this country," Cecil Bishopp Harmsworth, brother of the late Lord Northcliffe, said today while waiting to call on Governor Fuller. He is here on a two-day visit.

"You do not seem to have the skyscrapers that are characteristic of American big cities, or at least I haven't observed them yet," he said. "Boston's narrow, crooked streets look a great deal like London to me, or like many old English towns. In that way it is the same Boston I saw 30 years ago, on my last visit."

Mr. Harmsworth, who is publisher of the London Daily Mail, entertains little fear of the American-Mexican crisis casting its shadow over international politics. He said that his four years' experience as Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in England, from 1918 to 1922, made him share Secretary Kellogg's views on the Bolshevist character of the Mexican condition.

MRS. FRANCIS B. HARRISON IS GIVEN PARIS DIVORCE

Paris, Jan. 14 (I.N.S.)—The Seine tribunal has granted a divorce to Mrs. Francis Burton Harrison, the former Salena Elizabeth Wrentmore.

Harrison was formerly Governor General of the Philippine Islands, and his marriage to Miss Wrentmore, who is considerably his junior, occasioned considerable comment in social circles. She was his third wife.

FILES STRIKE BILL TO STOP HUB LOSSES

As a direct outcome of the controversy between the Telephone Company and the building trades unions, a bill to make "jurisdictional and sympathetic" strikes illegal, was filed today at the State House by Representative Clarence S. Luitwieler of Newton.

The purpose of the bill, Luitwieler commented, is to prevent great economic loss to both labor and industry.

As an illustration of this waste, the Representative referred to the building industry in Boston. During 1926, he declared, approximately $125,000,000 was spent with an accompanying loss, through "jurisdictional and sympathetic" strikes, of from 10 to 15 per cent.

Luitwieler would define the phrase "unwarranted industrial warfare" in the statutes as meaning a strike or lockout when carried on:

1—By or in respect to employes whose terms of employment are fixed by the state or the United States, or any political sub-division thereof.

2—In violation of an agreement or for conditions of employment conflicting with an agreement between an employer and his employes, or an employer and any labor union.

3—In violation of any arbitration award, or for conditions of employment conflicting with the terms thereof.

4—To enforce terms of employment where a request therefor has not first been presented to the party from whom such terms are sought and a reasonable time given for their consideration.

5—Where there is no trade dispute involving issues of direct benefit to the acting parties.

6—To enforce demands where the party upon whom the demands are made is willing to submit them to arbitration to any public agency authorized by law to deal with such matters.

7—To prevent or terminate the employment of any person on the ground he is not a member of any union.

Under another section, the bill would make it unlawful to induce any person to engage in furthering or financing or give an "unwarranted industrial warfare."

BLOW AT UNION OF TEACHERS IN CAMBRIDGE

Aiming a direct blow at the proposed formation of a "union" among women teachers of the Cambridge Public Schools, Wendell D. Howie of Cambridge, today filed through Representative Henry L. Shattuck a bill prohibiting Cambridge from receiving State educational aid for its public schools.

The bill reads:

"Any municipality within the Commonwealth which permits its teachers in the public schools to become affiliated with labor unions or other distinctly class organizations shall forthwith lose its rights under the General Laws to any and all payments of State educational aid for such a period as said affiliation is permitted to continue."

During 1926, according to figures obtained at the State Department of Education Cambridge received $150,340 through this medium.

The bill comes as a result of a long controversy over the question of forming a "union" among the teachers which would be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

EXONERATES BROOKHART OF "LOBBYING" CHARGES

Washington, Jan. 14 (A.P.)—Senator-elect Smith W. Brookhart, Republican, of Iowa, was exonerated today by the Senate interstate commerce committee which inquired into intimations presented by Senator Stack, Democrat, Iowa, that Brookhart was a "paid lobbyist" for farm organizations and for Cyrus E. Woods, nominated as interstate commerce commissioner.

Oh, Step Aside, Men! Let the Women Buy; You Can't Stop 'Em

New York, Jan. 14.—A woman is negotiating for the purchase of a seat on the New York Stock Exchange. There is nothing but precedent to prevent approval by the exchange authorities. She would be the first owner of a seat, although several women are members of stock exchange firms.

Apparently she must pay at least $100,000, the latest record price for a seat.

The woman boss of New York boxing bouts says that women will attend fights as freely as they do football games. Mrs. Florence S. Knapp, who as Secretary of State temporarily has supervision of the boxing commission, is to see her first fight a week from tonight when Eddie La Barba meets Elkey Clark.

TANKER AFIRE AT TAMPICO; 8 TO 12 DIE

Mexico City, Jan. 14 (U.S.)—Between eight and twelve lives are believed to have been lost in a fire aboard the British tanker Ioana at Tampico, according to dispatches received today. Twenty-nine workers burned in the fire were removed to the hospital. Three of them died enroute.

Gasoline in cases was being unloaded from the tanker when a net handling several cases broke and they were thrown upon the docks, crashing and releasing the gasoline which burst into flame.

FIRE DAMAGES TAYLOR STOCK
Blaze in Furniture Store Threatens to Destroy Christmas Goods

Fire starting from an unknown cause threatened to destroy the entire stock of the Taylor Furniture Company at 770 Washington street at the corner of Bennett.

The blaze originated near the mezzanine floor on the rear of the building and filled the entire floor with smoke before it was discovered by the night watchman.

The Back Bay department, headed by Deputy Chief Hall, battled the greatest part of the evening with the flames before they were able to get at the blaze. Further assistance was then called in for fear upper floors of the building were damaged by heavy smoke, while stores, filled with Christmas toys located in the basement, were damaged by water.

TAYLOR FURNITURE CO. LOSS TOTALS $150,000

The Taylor Furniture Company of No. 770 Washington street, which had the fire which started in the basement of their store amounted to $150,000 yesterday, when a fire, starting from unknown causes in the store room of the company, threatened to destroy the entire stock of furniture on the third, fourth and fifth floors of the building.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Youthful Members of Society Dance Amid Rainbow Glow of Lights at the Country Club, Brookline

THROUGH SHAFTS OF RAINBOW COLORED LIGHTS that made a weaving Maypole effect, the youthful set danced blithely at the Country Club as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Weeks, and in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Katherine Weeks. The colored lights that made the ballroom kaleidoscopic were an after-supper surprise for the guests, turned on thus late in the festivities when the elders, to a great extent, have made their adieux and the ballroom and the bands belong entirely to the young people—and which is, so everyone declares, the most enjoyable portion of the whole jolly evening.

MISS WEEKS VERY CLEVERLY and effectively dispensed with the proverbial "bouquet" as part of her ball costume and instead carried a graceful fan, whose feathery fronds ranged through the rose tones from palest blush to deepest American Beauty. As a brilliant splash of color against the clear white of her chiffon and velvet frock, with gardenias on the shoulder. It was very telling. Rhinestones glinted on the bodice, and there was an outline of silver also. Mrs. Weeks wore a very handsome creation of sky-blue velvet (it's called "wedding-ring" velvet because it is so fine and delicate that it can go through a ring).

THE HALF-HUNDRED DINNER GUESTS entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Weeks at the Country Club were principally of Miss Weeks' own set, with just a sprinkling of the parents. Forsythia, in great profusion, and bright pink begonias shared favor as a dinner and dance decorative motif, but even these could not hope to compete with the rainbow lights that flooded the scene so prettily. Theodore Hollander was the head usher, and his staff composed twenty-five or more young men, including James Cunningham Gray, Sherman Damon, Bruce Beal, James Parker, Jr., and Theodore Brewster.

TAKING ON A GREATER GLAMOR with smart society in its younger element because it is the first of the series, the Junior League Supper Dance at the Hotel Copley-Plaza this evening is an attraction of the first water. Several hundred of the Young Set (excluding the debutante and her immediate train of cavaliers) will sup and dance in the pleasant manner of these exclusive dances. Miss Josephine Jewell is entertaining a supper company of ten; Miss Virginia Roberts is hostess for eight, and Miss Nancy Wentworth for ten. Other young hosts and hostesses there are without number, for the Junior Supper Dance is to Young Set members all that the Senior Series is to the older coterie.

THE BRIGHTEST AND MOST INGENIOUS minds in the Copley Society are hard at it to make the forthcoming "Black and White Ball," on January 21, a "bill-topper" in the way of society affairs. It's a strenuous task they've set for themselves, for the Copley Society has to its credit a long and glorious record for picturesque costume pageants, richly put on and historically correct. Their "Bagdad Nights," their "Twelfth Night Revels" and their pageants, stretching back into the days when their stronghold was Copley Hall before they became identified with Rogers Hall, were affairs of magnificence, that scintillated through many seasons.

THE VAST DIMNESS of old Rogers Hall will undergo a magical metamorphosis beneath the subtle treatment administered by decorators, who are past masters of their art, and emerge transformed for the ball setting. Young art students studying in town are putting their inspirations down in black and white for costume suggestions to be passed on by experts of the society and to be awarded a prize or two. An hour of specialties, preliminary to the dance on the 21st, includes a puppet show, a song group, a solo dance, John Green of Harvard doing his jazz specialties at the pianoforte, and Le'hton Rollins' Repertory Theatre School class in word orchestration, something new Mr. Rollins is creating.

MRS. JOSEPH W. COURTNEY, Miss Nellie Thompson the artist, Mrs. William Otis Kimball, F. Lyman Clark, William Haselton, Louis Stedman and Leighton Rollins are some of the Copley Society's members who are guiding "Black and White Ball" destinies. New details take form at each meeting of these energetic souls, to the end that the ball will be "the" costume event of the season. Mr. Rollins of the committee is taking a few days away in New York just now to see a whirlwind tour and tell, under smart Metropolitan auspices, of the Repertory Theatre's place in the community. He stays at the Belmagundi Club, and Mrs. John Jay White of Peterboro and Gotham is one of his dinner hostesses. She entertains for him Sunday.

THE BOSTON VISIT of Princess Michael Cantacuzene is ended and the former Clarissa Curtis is back at her Chicago home again.

The youthful and attractive spouse of the young Russian expatriate was very quietly entertained during her Boston stay by a coterie of girlhood friends, the chief object of her mid-winter visit being of a filial nature—to be with her mother, Mrs. "Tom" Curtis, who is passing through a slow but sure convalescence. The Princess Cantacuzene was one of the handsome young women attending Boston's supreme social function, the Assembly Ball, which took place at the Copley-Plaza only a week ago.

UNHERALDED, BUT NEVERTHELESS OF MUCH importance in the holiday entertainment recently completed, was the reception and tea Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Cummings of No. 6 Joy street gave, earlier in the week, for their elder daughter, Miss Ethel Cummings, and her fiance, John Malcolm Forbes, of Milton. Miss Cummings came out several years ago, to become immediately a highly popular young set leader. Young Mr. Forbes is studying for a theological career, and both young people have an imposing family connection that has held a foremost place in the town's history during several generations.

MRS. PUTNAM McDOWELL, the former Miss Barbara Ballou, is an attractive member of the young matron set who takes a very lively interest in the Repertory Club affairs. At the recent Revels she was gaily attired for waitress duties in a silk prints frock. Miss Helen Walker and Miss Barbara Aldrich, Miss Ruth Walker and Miss Susan Morse were also fair waitresses for the occasion.

NICHOLS' SON FINDS HE'S ILL

home before they get the snow off Jamaica Pond so they can skate.

My daddy and uncle were newspaper reporters too once. Daddy says it's easier than being mayor and lots more fun. It must be great to find out somebody's got adenoids and sinus and put it in the papers so they can be surprised to read it.

Uncle Fred says they take adenoids out like the barber cuts your hair. I never like to get my hair cut, but it don't hurt, anyway. The fellers who had tonsils with their adenoids said that they took them out when they were sleeping and they never felt it.

I rather have adenoids and sinus any day than get my picture took. I'm like Marjorie that way. She's my little sister. She hates the flashlights that the newspaper pictrumers shoot her picture with. I don't like them neither. They scare you worse than adenoids and sinus.

The sliding and skating isn't so good now, anyway, so I just as soon go to the hospital for a couple of days. Uncle Fred says I'll be back like I was. Maybe I can try newspaper work on my teacher and find out our test report for the fellers before the teacher tells us. Wouldn't she be surprised to read it. But not right away though, 'cos I'm going to have some holidays before going back to school after I lose my adenoids.

Nurses are good to boys and let them have lots of company and candy.

Street Meetings

Representative Fred A. Hutchinson of Lynn today filed a bill at the State House to give towns the right to regulate or prohibit the holding of religious meetings in the streets. The bill is an echo of the banning of "Sally" meetings on Lynn streets by Mayor Ralph S. Bauer.

RABBI CHARGES HUNTER WITH PREJUDICE

Rallying to the support of the League of Neighbors, which organization was attacked by Edward H. Hunter, secretary of the Industrial Defense Association, in a recent speech before the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams of Brookline today charged Hunter with prejudice.

"I do not know the source of information from which Mr. Hunter has drawn his charges and accusations," said the rabbi, "but I am very much afraid he has been misinformed and misled by prejudiced and biased minds. My contact with that organization, for which I was very pleased to speak at various times and for which I am still to make several addresses during the year, has indicated to me that its work is highly desirable and very much to be complimented."

Hunter charged the league with forming "hot beds" of Communism in 120 of the leading colleges throughout the country. He also said the league had so far progressed with its work that many of the professors were "highly tinged with red." The speech was made at the First Corps Cadets Armory January 6.

DIVORCEE BANS MEN AND THE JUDGE SMILES

Westerly, R. I., Jan. 14.—"Men are lazy, what I have seen of them," says Mrs. Lucy Rivelli, mother of two children, who has a divorce decree today from Donato Rivelli.

"I am done with men and matrimony," the young grass widow said today. "I have my two children and shall devote all my time to them from now on."

Judge Turano Lucy Rivelli

Judge Michael J. Turano, her counsel, merely smiled when his young client expressed her views on men.

WIANNO CLUB TAX IS RULED ILLEGAL

Henry G. Lapham and Ashton P. Darby in Federal Court today defeated the government in an attempt to assess a tax upon their initiation fee as members of the exclusive Wianno Club at New Bedford.

In finding for the plaintiffs, Judge James M. Morton declared the "entrance tax" was illegally levied on evidence offered him that Lapham paid a tax of $50 and Darby a tax of $20 on exactly similar conditions of entrance to the club.

HEAD OF $10,000,000 RUM RING GIVEN TWO YEARS

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Emil Wormser, wealthy resident of Riverside Drive, and convicted head of the Port Chester rum ring, was sentenced to two years in Atlanta Penitentiary and fined $10,000 in United States District Court today.

Three confederates were given lesser sentences.

Throughout the ring, which was reported to have had assets of approximately $10,000,000, operated vessels landing smuggled liquor at Port Chester and nearby shore points.

"Leviathan Sank; All Rescued"—Meaning Lighter, Four Men

Readers of ship dispatches today read the startling report:

"New York, Jan. 14.—Leviathan sank today off Ninety-second street, East River, in collision with a New Haven Railroad tug. All on board rescued by tug."

The Leviathan mentioned, however, proved to be a lighter used in scurrying around East River.

"All on board" proved to be the crew of four men.

STRIKE HALTS MALDEN P. O.

Work on the new Malden post-office building at Fery and Prescott streets was halted today when twenty mason's tenders walked out on strike as a result of alleged employment of non-union workers.

The tenders' walkout immediately stopped the work of the masons, and iron-workers employed on the building threaten to strike on Monday in sympathy, it was said.

Coleman Brothers Company of Boston is in charge of construction, and claims that the men agreed to allow some of Coleman's non-union employes to work on the building.

The strikers assert that when they made the agreement, it was to extend only until the foundations of the building were laid.

It is expected that the work would be completed earlier, as the lease on the present postoffice quarters terminates February 1.

COMMEND MELROSE MAN AS HERO OF SHIP FIRE

Harold W. Firdsell, No. 313 Grove street, Melrose, chief machinist's mate in the Coast Guard, has been commended for heroism.

Birdsall, on board the cutter Modoc, when she went to the rescue of the fire-stricken schooner Charles A. Dean, at Wilmington, N. JURY DISAGREES IN SUIT AGAINST EX-CHIEF QUINN

A disagreement was reported today by the jury in the suit of John Magnus of Newton in Salem Superior Civil Court against the trustee in bankruptcy of William L. Quinn, deposed chief of the Swampscott police. Magnus sought to recover $7,600, which he claimed he paid Quinn after he had been arrested for rum-running in Swampscott in November, 1924. The jury was discharged after making its report.

'CAPTAIN' IN FILM, CAPTAIN IN WAR

Victor McLaglen, who plays "Captain Flagg" in the film version of "What Price Glory," coming Monday to the Majestic, had cherished no particular ambition to become a picture star until after he was mustered out of the British army as a captain after the World War armistice.

A chance meeting with Commodore J. Stuart Blackton in London led to his first work before the camera. His taking a screen test was Blackton's idea, not McLaglen's. His screen debut was opposite Lady Diana Manners in "The Glorious Adventure."

McLaglen is the son of an Anglican Bishop and was born in London. Previous to his becoming an actor McLaglen led a career of soldiering and adventure which began with his enlistment in the Royal Life Guards at the age of fourteen. His extraordinary physique, even at that age, deceived the recruiting sergeant.

He fought with the Guards all through the Boer War and then went to Canada as a prize-fighter. He reached a climax on March 10, 1909, when he fought Jack Johnson for the world's heavyweight championship at Vancouver. Johnson won the ten-round bout, but with McLaglen on his feet at the finish.

After his defeat, McLaglen went into vaudeville, teaming up with a brother. Their bookings took them to Hawaii, Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, India and South Africa. They arrived at Capetown just as England declared war against Germany and went promptly to London to enlist. Victor immediately got a commission with the Royal Irish Fusiliers. Later, with Cheshire Rifles in Mesopotamia, he was promoted to a captaincy.

DIVIDE $1,000 BOND BETWEEN CLAIMANTS

Acting as legal stakeholder in a contest over a Fourth Liberty Loan bond of $1,000, Assistant United States Attorney Telophere LeBoeuf was today commissioned by Federal Judge Brewster to sell the certificate and distribute the proceeds equally between claimants.

The bond was given as surety for the release of Moise Abrahamian, a Syrian immigrant, pending discussion of his entry to the United States. He was admitted and the bond sold to a Boston bank.

Ashes, Barrel, Fire

A hod of ashes was dumped into a wooden barrel in the cellar of the house at 27 Stratton street, Dorchester, today. Mrs. Sarah F. Shane a short time later discovered her house was on fire. The ashes had set fire to the barrel, and from that the flames caught the cellar woodwork and went to the kitchen. The pavement was called. The loss was about $300

WIFE RIDICULES FREE LOVE CHARGES OF BISHOP'S SON

Mr. Candler asserted that her husband had been unable to support her and forced her to leave him because of his "abusive language and incompatibility of temper."

GOLDEN ROADS by Winifred Van Duzer
Author of "THE GOOD BAD GIRL"

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN
A HOME PAPER FOR THE PEOPLE WHO THINK

BOSTON, FRIDAY JANUARY 14, 1927

SECOND SECTION

An Amazing Love Story of a Misunderstood Hub Working Girl

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Gay Moore and her cousin, Christine Noe, are employed in the State Street house of Johnstone Baird, Gay as a typist and Christine as a telephone operator. Christine is in love with Roger Pennington, whose wealth and social position appeal to her love of luxury. Stanley Baird, Penn's chum and son of Johnstone Baird, is in love with Gay. Gay returns his love. Johnstone Baird forbids his son to see Gay. Gay visits Stan's mother. Johnstone Baird accuses Gay of being determined to marry his son. Gay tells Stan he is an idler. He determines to earn his own living and leaves her. Gay hears nothing from Stan. Penny assures her he is all right.

Stan is ill with pneumonia. Gay sits by Stan's bedside until the doctor assures her that Stan will live.

CHAPTER 17.

Stanley knew her when she came in.

The nurse said, "Two minutes—and not a word!" So she stole beside him, smiling through tears kissed her finger and laid it against his lips—and was gone while his eyes, so heavy, lighted.

But the next day he was stronger and the nurse said five minutes.

"Gay!" His voice came faintly, as if drawn from far away.

"Dearest—dearest! You'll get well now? For Gay? Oh—" She held his hand to her throat, pressing it. "I'll never let you go again! I know now—never again!"

A ghost of the merry smile came into his face. "You're satisfied, Sunshine? Proved myself have I? Boasted too soon. Money for the furniture gone."

He mended so fast after that as to puzzle the doctor. And soon she was spending an hour with him each day. Then she began to urge him to give up the Johnny Jones fiction.

"But the family'll come down and bother," he objected. "You were right about everything, honey. I began to like myself better before I'd been on my own a week. Remember what you said—the only useful thing I could do was drive a car? Set me thinking. Always sort of liked machinery. That's why I went into a shop. More fun than fooling around an office. Boss is a bright young fellow—coming to see me often. Expects me back. Got ideas about motors. We're working on something together. May turn out pretty big. I want to finish that, anyway.

"You see, Gay? When my folks find out they'll raise a row. I don't feel like any woof-woof talk yet."

So it was not until the day before he was ready to leave the hospital that Penny was sent with a message to Johnstone Baird.

In the meantime they had made all their plans—Stanley and Gay. He'd go away for a couple of weeks to recuperate. When he came back they'd be married, with Christine and Penny to attend them. Very simple it would be, very sweet.

When Gay came home evenings now she found Mary sewing on silken white things, lovingly, with her eyes wet sometimes. The lace veil her great-great grandmother had worn for her own wedding was brought from the cedar chest in the attic, shaken into a cloud of creamy foam, placed in the sun to freshen.

"Happy, baby?" Jaimie would ask her, over his folded hands. They looked lonely, somehow, those great hands.

"Well, did he want her to say she was sad? Looking for an excuse to stop everything, was he, so he could keep his big girl home?"

"No—no—I mean it, Gay. He's a fine lad, to be sure. Ah, yes—a fine lad."

She knew what he was thinking and sometimes felt a ripple of doubt in her own heart. Stanley had proved himself resourceful and brave. But, after all, what were three months? Supposing he drifted back to fitness—occupied himself with trivial things? So young yet—so deep in the temptations of great wealth. . .

If only it might be otherwise! But nothing could hold her back now, she kept telling herself. "I understood the night we thought he was going to die. Whatever comes—good or bad—forever and ever. He's mine—my man!"

She wrote a brief note to Johnstone Baird giving up her position. She wished to leave the following Saturday.

And on Thursday Penny took him the news of Stanley. Penny spoke a word as he came back from lunch. "Whole family's been to see him. Devil of a rumpus. He didn't give an inch—announced the wedding and everything. Old man's red-headed. Thought maybe

Here's Chance for All Weatherman Post Aspirants

Local weather forecasters are so peeved over the way the snow and cold have upset their predictions that they let you take your choice of weather today, and then you have yourself to blame.

Maybe it will snow. Maybe it will rain. Maybe it will do both. Maybe it will do neither.

Write your own book.

COLD WAVE TO STRIKE BOSTON TONIGHT

Extremely cold weather is due in Boston tonight, according to the local weather forecaster, and a howling blizzard is sweeping toward the Atlantic Coast from the region of Chicago, though it may not descend on the Hub.

The mercury is likely to drop to 10 above zero in this city. Forecaster Loveland made this prophecy in the face of a temperature of 44 during the day.

Death and property destruction were left in the wake of the snow storm that hit Chicago and the middle west, five persons being dead in Chicago as a result. Nearly two thirds of the area of the United States is under a blanket of snow ranging in depth from three to 12 inches.

The cold wave here is due to continue at least through Saturday, accompanied by fresh northwest winds.

Based on the basis of weather bureau predictions today, there will not be much difference between weather conditions in New England and the South Atlantic regions.

The forecast promised rain, snow and colder temperature on the Maine coast tonight, while the Florida forecast for tonight and Sunday said the temperature would go below the freezing point in the northern portion and would be "near freezing" in the central area, with fresh northern winds prevailing.

FILES BILL FOR A NEW $25,000,000 TRANSIT PLAN

Appointment of a Northern Transit Commission to establish a system of rapid transit between Boston and points north is called for in a bill filed today by Senator Edward J. Cox of Boston. For purposes of legislation in connection with the commission, $25,000,000 would be issued in bonds jointly by the counties of Suffolk and Essex and the cities of Boston, Lynn, Revere, Salem and Winthrop. Among improvements which the commission would be authorized to construct would be a tunnel from Jeffries Point to South Boston, a ferry from the East Boston airport to South Boston.

HEARING NEXT MONTH ON PORT DIFFERENTIALS

The Maritime Association today was notified that oral argument on Examiner Hosmer's report on the New England ports differential case was set for February 28 at Washington before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The report recommends that port differentials on ex-lake grain from Buffalo be abolished.

Acceptance of Hosmer's report would enable this port to compete with Baltimore and Philadelphia for exportation of over 150,000,000 bushels annually.

ASK 160 MORE MEN FOR STATE CONSTABULARY

An increase of 160 in the strength of the State constabulary is asked for in a bill filed today by Representative Slater Washburn of Worcester with the Legislature. The present force consists of 140 men.

Cities and towns, under another bill sponsored by Captain Charles T. Beaupre of the constabulary, would be given authority to have the services of the State police provided the wages and expenses of men so detailed was met by the municipalities.

Drank Disinfectant

Mrs. Fanny Heckula, twenty-eight, of No 97 Garfield street, Quincy, is in no critical condition at the Quincy Hospital with her name on the danger list as the result of her drinking a quantity of disinfectant today.

Yesterday the American and Advertiser gained 120 classified ads over the corresponding day of last year.

Beaten Boy Pleads for His Jailed Mother

SOBS "POOR MOM! SET HER FREE!"

Youth Denies Parent Clubbed Him Xmas Eve; Bares Sad Story of Dingy Home

"Poor Mom! It's been a tough break for her ever since I was three."

On the sagging bed, far different than the neat cot from which he rose, sick and shivering, to go into court and plead for his mother, eighteen-year-old Stephen Moran sobbed a defence of her today and pledged himself to win her exoneration.

The mother, Mrs. Mary Moran, herself only 38, was held for the Grand Jury in Municipal Court yesterday—despite Stephen's plea—on a charge of assaulting him with intent to kill.

Calmly did the sick boy plead in court that she had not struck him; eagerly he declared that he himself had been drinking. But the young mother was led back to Charles Street Jail, while the boy, broken-hearted, went back—not to the hospital, but to the cold, cheerless two rooms in a South End alley off Tremont street, where he and his mother live.

"TOUGH BREAK FOR MOM!"

Huddled between the grimy covers, Stephen declared passionately that his mother was not in a drunken stupor the day before Christmas, as police charge, or that in that stupor she struck him with a hammer.

"It's been a tough break for her ever since I was three," he said. "My father died then, but I remember we had always had all the good things there were.

"We had a big place, with heat, and plenty to eat and Mom used to sing and be happy, you know. It wasn't like this."

He turned on his cot with an apologetic glance around the bare bedroom, at the oil lamp on a chair, and next to that a glass with the cloudy stains of milk. On the floor were his mother's belongings; shoes and bundles and books and hats.

TRAGEDY CAUSED WOES.

"Poor Mom," he murmured. "She's pretty young, you know, only 38. Nothing matters about me, but gee I can't let her suffer like this! She's worked for me and my sister brothers. She's been waiting on table for fifteen years.

"The kid brother started her to drink. It was his first job, three years ago. He was only 14 and he got killed in an elevator shaft. Poor Mom almost went crazy when they brought that body home.

"But I was drunk that Xmas night, honest to Heaven! Can't I make anybody believe me? My Mom never hit me in her life. She's been good to me. She worried and brought us up; why shouldn't I help her now?"

TRANSFER SENTENCE OF CONVICTED PATROLMAN

Pleading that his client, Louis R. Murray, suspended patrolman of the East Dedham street station, is suffering from a severe illness, Attorney John P. Feeney today obtained a transfer of sentence from Judge Elmer Bigge in Roxbury District Court. Murray was found guilty a week ago on charges of drunkenness and driving while under the influence of liquor through streets on Christmas Eve and was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction. Attorney Feeney told the court that the institution was unable to provide treatment which Murray needed. Judge Briggs consented to transfer the prisoner to Charles street jail.

'ARMY JUST REFUSES TO GRAND', BUT TAKE MARY

Bangor, Me., Jan. 14.—Mary Pinton of Washington street, isn't in the army now, but it isn't her fault, because Recruiting Sergeant Joseph Bloom knows she tried hard enough.

Mary is a very charming young miss, who thinks "the army is just grand," and can't see why the honor of being a doughboy should be confined to the inferior male.

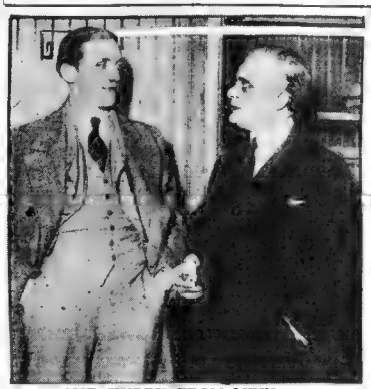
"Women can vote," says Mary. "And women can hold office. Why can't I join up if I want to?"

Sergeant Bloom tried to explain that there are regulations that let women out. But even then contrary Mary was not to be daunted. She asked for clerical and nurse jobs, but was told she was in the wrong place.

"I'm mad," she said and headed for the door, but halted once more. "Say, sergeant, can't I really join the army?"

"NO!" Bloom cried and rushed for the door.

Three Husbands ⇔ With But a Single Wife



ONE HUBBY FROM LYNN

Though Raymond N. Evans, John G. Todd and Joseph Dresdner appear to have the same wife, they didn't discover the triple alliance until they met at the pier in New York when their wife sailed for London. Evans' home is in Lynn, and he is seen here with Dresdner, right, who seems inclined to break up the "entente."

HAS HUSBANDS TO SPARE

Ruth Terry, Broadway star, now playing with "The Gold Diggers" in London, dug up so many husbands the courts will have to count "eeny-meeny-miny" to find out who is it. No. 3, instead of saying "Goodbye" to her at the pier, said "How-de" to No. 1 and No. 2. The third third of her mates then started something.

THREE HUBBIES MEET WIFE AT THE PIER

Ruth Terry, Broadway stage star now playing in London, has three living husbands, one of them a former Lynn youth, according to complaint made today in Newark, N. J., to Judge Frank Boettner, who said he would forward the charge to the county prosecutor.

The Lynn man is Raymond N. Evans, according to the complaint, and it is alleged that Evans met the other two "husbands" when all arrived at the dock to bid her "bon voyage" on the occasion of her sailing for England.

The complaint was filed by Joseph Dresdner, who says he is "Husband No. 3." Evans is said to be a graduate of a Boston law school and now a practicing attorney in New York, after a career in the West when he met the actress, whose off stage name is Ruth Carter. The third man in the case is said to be John G. Todd.

Mrs. Jerome Evans of Eastern avenue, Lynn, said today that she didn't know Raymond, twenty-nine years old, if he was married and he denied it. That was two months ago, she said, when he was home for a visit. She said she is not sure whether it is her son who is involved, but thinks it may be.

Miss Terry is appearing in the part of Topsy St. John in "The Gold-Diggers," which opened its London engagement December 14.

2 DOCTORS ARE SLIGHTLY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

The automobile of Dr. Robert E Dickerson of No. 6 Liberty avenue Somerville, skidded in Charles street in front of the Phillips House of the Massachusetts General Hospital today. The machine struck a trolley feed wire pole, turned completely around and crashed through an iron picket fence, finally banging against the hospital wall.

Dr. Dickerson, the driver, escaped with a few scratches, but Dr. James Lanuel of No. 74 Powderhouse boulevard, Somerville, and Lester Knox of No. 275 Powderhouse boulevard were injured about the legs

SAYS 'REDS' ACTIVE IN FUR TRADE

Boston is likely to figure prominently in the proposed investigation by the [illegible] government called by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor into the activities of the Soviet government of Russia among the fur workers of the United States.

According to Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, in session at St Petersburg, Fla., Boston was the centers of Red activity last Fall.

This, he said, was evident at the Fur Workers' convention and in events that followed the session. As a result the executive council of the Federation in session in Florida is seeking a means to smash up the control of the alleged Communist group over the International Fur Workers' Union of New York.

In an executive session the council has pledged all possible assistance and co-operation to the union in ridding itself "of Communistic leadership and destructive influences."

SENDS VOICE BY VIOLET RAYS

The transmission of the human voice on the invisible beams of ultra violet light, will be one of the unusual experiments demonstrated tonight by Dr. Donald G. Stockbarger of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the Society of Arts Popular Science Lecture.

Last year Dr. Stockbarger succeeded in transmitting sound over beams of ordinary light. Further studies in radio transmission have enabled him to accomplish the feat on invisible rays.

Motion pictures projected on ultra-violet rays, invisible except when thrown on a fluorescent screen, will also be shown at Tech for the first time by Dr. Stockbarger.

Other features of his lecture will include how ultra-violet radiations may be used for chemical analysis and their value for treatment of diseases, also their possibility for use in future automobile head lights, to eliminate the dangerous glare.

KLAW'S RETIREMENT IS SEEN IN THEATRE SALE

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.)—The New York American says: More Klaw's complete retirement from the theatrical world is forecast by the sale of the Klaw Theatre in West 45th street. Klaw is 73 and for several years has planned to retire. He still is part owner of the New Amsterdam and Liberty theatres here and a few in Chicago and on the Pacific Coast. Klaw and Erlanger were among the large producers of the country for many years. The partnership ended in a dispute in the courts.

Wires for the Aerial

Aerial wires may be either insulated or not. The only effect is upon the durability of the wires, and not upon the reception. Bare copper wire, No. 14, is used extensively for amateur aerials. This is perfectly satisfactory when new, but as it soon becomes corroded from exposure to the weather, it is uneconomical in the long run. Phosphor bronze is sometimes used, but this has a rather high resistance. Aerials made of the regular weather proofed insulated wire used for long-distance power lines can also be employed.

For the Notebook

The average life of a receiving set is four years.

Before placing the battery on charge be sure to get the correct polarity.

Mount the set on a solid base to prevent microphonic noises.

If there is more than one wire in the aerial, they should be connected together.

To work properly from a loop aerial, a set should have three stages of radio frequency amplification.

Too much solder at the joint of a wire is not good, due to the resistance of the solder being much higher than the copper wire.

Watt and Kilowatt

The unit of electrical power is the watt. A watt is the "power" represented by a current of one ampere flowing under a pressure of one volt. As kilowatt is 1000 watts.

A license fee of $2.75 is imposed on each receiving set in India before a listener is privileged to pick up broadcasts and entertainments.

Radiograms

Over 400, or nearly 70 per cent., of all the broadcasting stations in the United States are using "time" on the air.

The United States Department of Agriculture is the heaviest user of radio for information purposes. No fewer than 150 broadcasting stations send out a daily educational program of a half hour or more together with the market news service and weather forecasts.

Call letters assigned to the United States in the alternate international series and for matter combining with the letter N and all beginning with the letter W, are all broadcasting stations. KDA to KZZ inclusive. All combinations begin ing with the letter N are reserved for government stations and, in addition, the combinations of WUA to WUZ and WXA to WZZ are reserved for stations of the United States army.

Washington, Jan. 14.—An eleventh hour shift in plans to report to Congress the compromise radio bill postponed the final meeting of the conference committee until today, and may result in deferring the report of the bill until next week.

More use of your radio

When reception is clear and strong and the music sounds natural, listening to the radio is a genuine pleasure. And when you can enjoy that pleasure at little expense then you get a lot of use out of your radio. Ray-O-Vac batteries make better reception at less expense possible for every set.

For better reception

Radio engineers agree that for the best reception the "B" power unit should have low internal resistance. Ray-O-Vac batteries have only from ¼ to ½ as much resistance as other "B" power units.

Less renewing of batteries

And along with their lower internal resistance, Ray-O-Vac batteries have staying power. A new type of construction, with a pitchless top, increases the service of these long-life batteries by from 10% to 15%.

These are facts that radio owners are fast finding out. More than twice as many Ray-O-Vacs are in use today as there were a year ago!

Ask for Ray-O-Vacs by name. They are sold by leading stores dealing in radio equipment and supplies.

BIG GREEN TO PLAY IN WEST

Graduate Manager Heneage Announces Football and Court Teams Will Travel

By BILL GRIMES

"WHEN the 1928 football schedule is announced you will find Dartmouth tied up in a home and home game arrangement with one of the Western Conference teams," announced Harry R. Heneage, the newly appointed Dartmouth graduate manager.

"I believe that Dartmouth owes a great deal of its success in both scholastic and athletic endeavor to the Mid-West alumni. Although in the East you hear very little about the Dartmouth Western alumni it is one of the strongest and most loyal bodies in the country. Until Captain Nate Parker's championship team was sent to Chicago two years ago the Mid-West had not seen the 'Big Greens' perform for years.

"The University of Chicago-Dartmouth game not only gave the Dartmouth men of the West, who could not spare the time from business to come East, an opportunity to see their favorites in action, but it stirred up a great amount of interest in Dartmouth among the schoolboys in that section."

Graduate Manager Heneage's announcement of an intersectional game for Dartmouth confirms the rumor that was current last Fall regarding the "Big Green" tieup with Northwestern University. According to the story, the Chicago institution offered to play home and home games with Dartmouth on the basis of a fifty-fifty split of the gate receipts.

FROWNS ON CONFERENCE.

"I have been asked time and again," continued Heneage, "regarding Dartmouth's attitude towards Eastern Conference. I don't want to see Dartmouth tied up to practically the same schedule year after year. I believe that the team should take on colleges from different parts of the country. Also, I am as far as possible the various sound bodies throughout the country should be taken into consideration.

"Recently, I was misquoted to the extent of saying that I did not think much of the Western Conference. What I did say was that I did not believe in the conference, whether they were in the West or the East.

"Evidently I dropped a bomb in the works when I cancelled the baseball Southern trip and announced that the track team would go South this Spring. The ball club has been journeying to the land of sunshine, during the April vacations, for decades, while the best that has ever been offered the track team is a trip to the Intercollegiates. During the winter months, we sent a relay team and a few stars to New York and Boston, and in the Spring a couple of relays are allowed to compete in the Penn Relays.

"In my opinion a trip South will be of far more value to the track squad than to the baseball crowd. I have noticed that college baseball teams which play North play East as well as those that have been sent South for their early training. Besides, I believe that interest in track athletics will be greatly stimulated if every college athlete thinks more of making a trip with a varsity team than they do of having the girls at the Winter Carnival or the junior prom. Interest in baseball would still hold, if the squad went North or Hanover.

"The varsity basketball team will be sent West next year. I am arranging a trip through Buffalo, Cleveland and Chicago and if possible will have the team return through Pennsylvania."

HENEAGE PROGRESSIVE.

In Harry Heneage, who was in the class of 1907 and a varsity halfback, Dartmouth has the right man in the right place. Heneage is progressive. He has followed athletics closer than the average Dartmouth man since he left college days during a football season.

Being, first of all, a football man, Heneage will be a great asset to Dartmouth. He can and will listen intelligently to all football arguments regarding equipment, officials and schedules, of which the general run of new graduate managers know little or nothing about. In his brisk western style, which he has retained despite his fifteen years in New York, Heneage speaks right out from the shoulder. He is a fighter and within a comparatively short time he will rid Dartmouth of the fraternity menace.

TANK STARS IN FIRST MEET

The curtain will be raised on the indoor swimming season tomorrow evening, when the Brookline Athletic Club sponsors its annual invitation meet in connection with two New England championship events at the Brookline Public Baths. The various natatorium in that city, according to present indications, will indeed be a lively place as of 1927.

Whitinsville, Boston Swimming Association, Norwood Swimming Club, Bowl Club of Boston, Brookline Swimming Club, and the Mark Club of Everett have entered the most powerful water polo squads in New England and will meet each other in the [illegible] Boston [illegible] Metropolitan A. A. U. championship. Manager Hurley and Lloyd Harris, the Yankee [illegible] will be in attendance.

[illegible] Mays, one of which was taken by [illegible], were they? I met Colonel Huston.

"Oh, we decided that it was best to keep this quiet," he replied. "I knew that the Yankee pavement had been nailed the straightest narrow path. I suggested that Jake Landis go over to Boston, where our team was playing at the time, and give them a severe lecturing and see if it got that."

Yankee Slump for 13 Cited in 1922 Is Said to Have Been Caused by Betting

New York, Jan. 14 (I.N.S.)—The New York Evening Journal declares today in an article signed by W. S. Farnsworth, sports editor, [illegible] betting scandal involving [illegible] of the Yankee baseball club in 1922, we read today. The stakes were made by Detective Kelly, a Burns man employed by club owner T. L. Huston of the time was half owner of the New York team. Kelly was hired by the owner, it is said, to [illegible] the conduct of the players both off and on the field, was [illegible] season but [illegible] that Shawkey [illegible] games.

"The player specifically named by Kelly is Carl Mays, now a hurler on the Cincinnati National League club."

After hearing Kelly, I went to Georgia where Colonel Huston is spending the Winter, and told him of the [illegible] the detective. Huston admitted that Kelly had turned in reports of Mays's betting, but the colonel also admitted that he had called a meeting in New York in June, 1922, and that Judge Landis, then president of the National League, Colonel Jacob Ruppert, of the Yankees, [illegible] of the managers of the club and now also Manager Huggins and Harry Harper, the Yankee pitcher, attended.

"[illegible] was not taken but the scandal, were they?" I asked Colonel Huston.

"No, we decided that it was best to keep this quiet," he replied. "I knew that the Yankee pavement had been nailed the straightest narrow path. I suggested that Judge Landis go over to Boston, where our team was playing at the time, and give them a severe lecturing and see if it got that."

RUNYON Says—

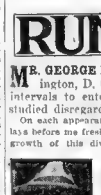
MR. GEORGE MARSHALL, that big soap-suds man of Washington, D. C., appears before me in New York at regular intervals to enter protest at what he seems to consider my studied disregard of his favorite pastime, which is basketball.

On each appearance Mr. Marshall has before me fresh evidence of the growth of this diversion over the land, especially with reference to the American League which professional basketball clubs, in which he owns a franchise on behalf of the nation's capital.

Last week he buzzed in an armload of Philadelphia newspapers to show me how an attendance record had been broken in the City of Brotherly Love, where the franchise is owned by Mr. Jules Aronson, the boxing entrepreneur of the Philadelphia Arena, and by Mr. Max Two Rows Hoff, the custodian of the largest collection of scrambled ears in the boxing game.

I would be willing to wager that Mr. Hoff did not know a basketball from a nut-kinnery, but it seems that he entered basketball when the proposition was submitted to him to keep unsullied his reputation for being willing to try anything once.



Damon Runyon

MR. MARSHALL himself was not a basketball man in the beginning, other than as a fan. His real business is laundering the linen of the citizens of Washington, D. C., including flat work.

Aside from his laundry concerns, Mr. Marshall is noted in Washington as the last surviving man about-town on the banks of the Potomac River. He is pointed out to visitors to the capital along with the Washington Monument and other sights of interest. But for Mr. Marshall, I am told that the three remaining night clubs in Washington would long ago have closed their doors.

Mr. Marshall was a baseball buff of some prominence, and a racing fan before he became apprised of the excitement of basketball. He went at the latter game with great avidity, but his friends did not become alarmed until he bought a league franchise and installed a high salaried team in Washington.

Now his interest in the pastime is so absorbing that I hear the proprietors of the night clubs are complaining because they see so little of Mr. Marshall. He has reached the stage where he goes on the road with his team to watch the play.

I GATHER from the public prints of Philadelphia that $033 citizens paid $6 878.40 to see a game between the Philadelphia team and the famous Celtics, now the Brooklyn members of the league. This crowd represents the capacity of the Philadelphia Arena. Thousands were turned away.

The cities in the American League besides Washington, Philadelphia and Brooklyn, are Cleveland, Fort Wayne, Rochester, Buffalo and Chicago. All are drawing well. The smallest town in the league, Fort Wayne, is one of the best basketball towns in the country. It is, in fact, the capital of the pastime, because interest in basketball has long been red hot in the region around Fort Wayne.

The Celtics, who now hold the Brooklyn franchise in the American League, have for years been the most famous basketballers of the East. They stand fourth in the league race, according to the last returns, with Cleveland leading, Washington second and the Phillies third.

Celtics Are Strong in Eastern Cities

OF course Mr. Marshall's plaint that I disregarded basketball is quite unfounded. I believe that this column was the first to exploit his favorite pastime at length—at such length, in fact, that old subscribers began writing in and demanding to know how I got that way.

Marshall Holds in Line with Movement

I am not personally, a basketball fan, but I can appreciate the importance of a game that is played by millions of amateurs, and draws thousands of dollars through the professional gates.

McCarthy Tunes Up for Huffman Bout

By JACK CONWAY

YOU never have to urge an Irishman to start a fight. This explains why the fans are jamming Jim Toland's gym each day to get a peek at Pat McCarthy, Roxbury heavyweight, who is finishing his training for his ten round battle with Eddie Huffman, one of California's sun-kissed mit artists, at Mechanics Building on Monday night, under the direction of Col. Bob McKinty of the Commercial A. A.

McCarthy, usually a soft spoken youth, has been so unkind as to smack Jack Huffman still [illegible] smacking from leather gloves driven forth by powerful arms which he parades into action in his [illegible] but in the [illegible]

Those who have watched McCarthy go through his training grind at Toland's have got a kick out of the way he has waded into sparring partners Ernie Schaaf, Joe Dundee, Mingoez and Al Friedman have been made to realize they have been in a contest. [illegible] one of the best of the heavyweight crop.

It isn't any secret that [illegible] ment McCarthy gets a little [illegible] that he will continue to direct [illegible] heavy fists at Jim Maloney. The [illegible] ager has absolutely refused to quit [illegible] Those two McCarthy [illegible]

[illegible] have been so cruel as to [illegible] that Maloney fears [illegible] any rival will punch him [illegible] of them ever meet.

While McCarthy and Huffman will perform in the big scene on Monday night, don't overlook Jack Gannon, New Bedford kayo artist, and Joe Monte of Brockton who collide in the semi-final. Gannon recently slipped Hambone Kelly and also brought an end to the come-back drive of Battling Levinsky. He says in open meeting he will knock Monte for a flock of goals.

REPRESENTATIVE PETER J. FITZGERALD'S bill to have the decisions of the judges and referees of boxing bouts made public should meet with the approval of the sport public. Under the present law, the [illegible] do not know how the various officials have voted. A judge or [illegible] who has voted correctly has [illegible] to be part of the burden of a [illegible] person.

I think that when judges and referees know that their [illegible] verdicts will be announced from the ringside that there will be less hard [illegible]

SWIMMERS READY FOR MARATHON

Cream of World's Natators to Compete in Catalina Swim for $40,000 in Prizes

By STED CHANDLER

WILLIAM WRIGLEY, JR., millionaire sportsman and owner of Catalina Island, in offering prizes totaling $40,000 for a successful swim from the island to the California mainland, set up a magnet which has drawn an aquatic gathering not only complete in its personnel, but in its assorted interest.

Virtually every famous long distance swimmer will be among the 145 probable starters, with the exception of Gertrude Ederle, who gave the course its start, and Jabbly Miss Claribelle Burgess, whose inhibitions regarding costumes are troubling her.

There are the experts the dark horses, the unknowns, the French flavor, and the Chinese. Strictly a mess marathon will be like a circus parade traversing a watery route toward the end of the rainbow.

50 TO 1 AGAINST SUCCESS.

Although odds are at 10 to 1 against anyone's completing the course, the goal is well worth seeking, for Mr. Wrigley has put up $25,000 for the winner, and should a man earn that prize, he will donate $15,000 to the first woman who finishes.

Swimmers who have conquered the Channel are there notably Henry Sullivan of Lowell, the first to swim from France to England, Charley Toth of South Boston, who also succeeded in that venture, and Mrs. Millie Gade Corson, the mother who followed in Miss Ederle's wake. Louis Timson of Lynn, and Miss Barrett, if she competes, are others who have made significant efforts across the Channel.

Norman Ross, Olympic champion and one of the greatest swimmers of all time, is numbered among the favorites in the race. Miss Lou Moore, Schoenmehl, the young New York mother, takes precedence among the fair entrants, due to her many record breaking performances.

"MASKED MARVEL."

A feature of the parade will be one who will be hailed the "Masked Marvel." If he fails to prove a "marvel" he will not remove the mask. Charley Zimm of Oakland, a legless man, maintains that this lack will assist rather than hinder his progress. Los Angeles contributes Leonard B. Moore and Miss Helen M. Meyers, the only married couple on the entry list.

Mrs. Tuffs, a woman of Holyoke and Everett Richards of Worcester complete the Massachusetts delegation.

Canada will be represented by George Young of Toronto and Oscar Perreault of Montreal. Hawaii by James J. Asher. Italy by Ilario Norvere. No word by Hitler as yet.

This Catalina swim is regarded as a test, could it be completed, of the English Channel, and the California waters have added additional hazard of running sharks. Much argument has ensued over the relative temperature of the water. Whether or not it is colder or warmer than the Pacific is not known. As a matter of fact the only difference is that the temperature is subject to sudden changes. The water, however, is said to be the lowest temperature yet recorded.

LANDIS DENIES '22 SERIES SCANDAL

Chicago, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, exploded anarly today in denying that he was secretly investigating a new scandal in baseball—the 1922 World Series between the Giants and Yankees.

The commissioner said that the first he knew about the latest rumor-monger was when he read today's papers.

"There's nothing to it" he exclaimed. "Those stories are now being cooked up by the newspapers. They print the story in one edition and then deny it in the next.

"I'm getting tired spending all my time making denials of these silly stories."

Dundee Still Rates Favorite

New York, Jan. 14 (A. P.)—Pugilistic dynamite that blasted the immediate championship aspirations of Joe Dundee a few weeks ago will be planted in front of the Ballmore roadlenger once more tonight at Madison Square Garden.

A five-ounce boxing glove wrapped around the husky right hand of Eddie Roberts from Tacoma, Wash., will carry the explosive into action, with Dundee a tempting target despite the one-round knockout defeat he suffered in his last gamble against Joe Chevalier. The battle, fixed for ten rounds marks the supreme test in Dundee's little drive, observers believe.

Although ring history reveals few fighters who have been able to come back after similar reverses, Dundee's previous impressive record has made him a favorite. Followers of the Baltimore man, explaining his knockout as probably due to a slow start, maintain that if Roberts survives the dynamite in Roberts' right hand during the first few rounds tonight, his fighting generalship should carry him to a decision.

Fights Tonight

New York—Joe Dundee, Baltimore, vs. Eddie Roberts, Tacoma, Wash., Madison Square Garden, 10.

Philadelphia—Jack Delaney, Canada, vs. Mickey Walker, Elizabeth, N. J., 10.

New York (10)—No title involved.

Pittsburgh (10)—Jack Delaney, vs. Vidmer Langford, Chicago (10).

DUNCAN CUTS U. S. TOUR SHORT; TO RETURN HOME

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.)—Jock Duncan, golf pro who is known to English people, has cut short American golf tour and is making plans to return home at once.

"I'm finished in New York," Duncan said today. "I'm leaving for Los Angeles this week and will sail for home from there. I'm through."

Duncan's decision to return home was announced by the manager of the Grand Hotel, where Duncan is staying. Duncan refused to discuss his plans.

A. A. U. EXONERATES PADDOCK OF PRO CHARGES

Los Angeles, Jan. 14 (A.P.)—Charles Paddock, who claims to hold a record for the 100 yard dash, was exonerated of charges of professionalism here tonight by the executive committee of the Southern California association of the Amateur Athletic Union. The investigation was requested by the national A. A. U. after Paddock's contract with a motion picture company was made public.

Paddock explained to the committee that he had signed the contract in order to get a start in the movies, but that his first engagement with no idea that it would be considered professional. The agreement has been withdrawn, he said.

GOLF BILL HEARING MONDAY

Rep. Bateman Ready to Start Fight for Public Course at Fowl Meadows

By BILL GRIMES.

REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS E. BATEMAN has everything in readiness for the hearing of his bill for a public golf course at Fowl Meadows, which will be held before the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs at the State House at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning.

In his endeavor to get the State to appropriate $75,000 for the construction of a municipal course for the citizens of Greater Boston, Representative Bateman has worked tirelessly and incessantly for more than a year. Data on public golf courses have been collected from every section of the country. He has worked out everything down to the smallest detail and feels confident that he has sufficient facts to put across the measure.

It is impossible to find a better area for a golf course than Fowl Meadows. It can be reached by auto over good State roads or by train to Readville. As the demand for public golf increases in the future, as it will, and even more rapidly than it has in the past, it would be possible for the Metropolitan District Commission to add nine-hole units to the original layout. There is room at Fowl Meadows for five 18 hole courses.

The Boston Evening American has lent its aid to the Bateman project since its initial report was filed last week. The writer has interviewed state and city authorities, golf architects, experts, prominent and professional public links golfers. All have been highly in favor of the Roman bill and bemoaning the lack of public golf courses in the section where golf was first introduced in this country. Of the hundreds of people interviewed, there has not been one word uttered against the need and necessity of more public golf courses.

After the bill is read to the committee on metropolitan affairs, it will, if favorably acted upon by that body, pass to the ways and means committee and then to the House of Representatives for a vote. If it meets with approval in the House it goes to the Senate and then to the ways and means committee of the Senate.

Representative Bateman of Winchester has done his duty. He has left no stone unturned. The future of the public golf course players is now in the hands of their Representatives and Senators, who, if they have the welfare of their constituents in mind, cannot vote other than for Fowl Meadows.

Fowl Meadows will offer a wealthy outdoor recreation for citizens who cannot afford to join private golf clubs and, therefore, if they desire to play the game, must join the crowds at Franklin Park, a wonderful layout, but wholly unable to care for the ever-increasing demand for golf.

Torterolo Leads Trainers on French Turf

Paris, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Horses trained by Juan Torterolo of Argentine during 1926 won stakes worth 2,500,000 francs more than any other trainer on the French turf.

He has trained winners for such owners as the Aga Khan, Senors Saturnino and F. Dalgaza Unsue, Simon Guthmann and J. A. Fernandez. He developed during the year, Biribi and Madrigal, which figured in most of the French classics.

Torterolo has never yet won the Grand Prix—Biribi finished second in it last year—but with eight crack three-year-olds entered for the Blue Ribbon event of the French turf. He has great hopes of putting a winner across in June.

PHIL SCOTT TO MEET BARTAZZOLO JAN. 27

London, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Phil Scott, British heavyweight champion, will meet the Italian champion Bartazzolo in Albert Hall, January 27, at 20 rounds for £2,500.

The bout was arranged after postponement of the match arranged between Scott and Piet Van Der Veer, Dutch heavyweight. Bartazzolo defeated Van Der Veer at Milan last month.

Boxing critics believe that unless Scott wins this fight it will be useless for him to carry out his plan to visit the United States, with any hope of attracting much attention there.

MOORE TO SUE HORNSBY

St. Louis, Jan. 14 (A.P.).—Refused a formal recognition of his claim, Frank Moore, a Fort Thomas, Ky., betting commissioner, today planned court action against Rogers Hornsby, member of the New York Giants and former baseball manager. Moore claims Hornsby owes him $90,000 for money advanced on race horse bets, a payment on an apartment house, and other items.

The betting commissioner returned here yesterday with his attorney, William Burkamp of Newport, Ky., bearing an itemized list of his claim, but had no success in two conferences with the baseball player and his attorney, William Fahey.

The latter, in a statement saying that Hornsby denied owing Moore any money, classed the betting commissioner as a "hero worshipper who tries to make friends with Hornsby," declared him in on a lot of bets Hornsby knew nothing about." Fahey said it was his opinion Moore had lost and expected Hornsby to pay losses incurred without his knowledge.

Burkamp replied that his client's answer would be in the form of a court petition.

Aaron Ward Joins White Sox

New York, Jan. 14 (A.P.)—Aaron Ward, veteran second baseman of the New York Yankees, today was pointed for the White Sox infield gap left by the departure of famous Eddie Collins.

In a deal between New York and Chicago teams yesterday, Ward passed from the metropolis after ten years of service with the Ruppert Club, going in exchange for Catcher John Grabowski and Infielder Ray Mershart.

A New Scandal Here in Boston Back in '02

Gambling Habit Babies Have It A Kid's Letter

HERE'S A NEW OLD SCANDAL FOR JUDGE L.

IT would seem that the whole past is cluttered up with scandals. We hate to bring anything to the attention of Commissioner Landis, but this being an age of veracity, it seems to be our duty to report a conversation we happened to overhear.

Nick Young, who is now a blase dramatic critic, and Sam Carrick, who writes essays on the Einstein theory and reads copy on international news, were chinning. Away back in the old days Nick used to make out box scores for the Associated Press, while Sam was the more or less veracious baseball chronicler for the Boston Record.

Nick Flatley

"Remember," questioned Nick, "that day the Athletics were playing the Bostons up at the Huntington avenue grounds?"

"Certainly I remember," responded Sam, who always remembers everything. "I always get a chill when I think of the way you called that one."

Naturally, that sounded suspicious. The Chicago wires and reports bred suspicion. So we made the veterans unfurl the story. It seems that Nick and Sam, in the course of their daily toil, were covering a drab game at John I. Taylor's ball yard.

Sam had a flock of books under his arm and wanted to go home to read. Nick had a date with a theatrical press agent, who was probably going to produce a few Lillian Russells. Both were impatient when the eighth inning arrived and nobody had scored.

"I hope someone busts one soon," implored Reporter Carrick.

"Listen, Sam," said Reporter Young, "this damn game is going to go seventeen innings, and then Monte Cross will break it up with a home run."

That showed the depths of Nick's desolation. Monte Cross one of the greatest fielders who ever snagged a grounder, couldn't hit a lick. He was the weakest batter that ever stayed in the big show. He had never made a home run and generally fanned when the pitchers were trying.

The game wore on, through the twelfth, the fourteenth and the sixteenth. No scores. Monte Cross came up in the seventeenth, took a blind cut, and sent the ball over the left field parapet. His first big league homer. It won the game, and proved N. Young a perfect prophet.

Judge Landis certainly should investigate that one.

BASEBALL PLAYERS CAN GIVE NO MORE GIFTS. THAT WILL NOT MAKE THE BALL PLAYERS SORE.

The winner of the Catalina swim will be chased by a lot of sharks long after he, or she, gets on dry land.

OFF THE PENCIL OF BABY COMES TIP-OFF

THIS is a gambling age, and all the laws and rules in the world will not change it. The following letter gives a pretty good tipoff on the younger generation. We hope that this publicity will give the young lady the opportunity she pines for.

Sport Editorial of the Boston American:

Dear Sir: [It's written in childish script on baby stationery].

Would you kindly inform me about the betting on the Catalina Island and Los Angeles Marathon swimming that taken place Saturday that I have $25 dollars I would like to place at odds at 10 to 1 that one of contenders will make the swim although I am only 12 years of age. My parents give me the permission to bet it. Kindly let me know at once so that I could place it before Saturday. Sincerely yours,

MISS MARJORIE BILLADEAU.

922 Ashmont St., Dorchester.

Little Miss Billadeau evidently means that she is willing to risk her $25 against $250 that someone will make the trip. Hopes she gets it, although with the $275 she will have if she wins, she may start a new baseball scandal.

Eggs and Fish Are an Aid in Keeping the Complexion Clear

By MARTHA LEE

ONE of the things that every woman doesn't seem to know is that meals planned around fish and eggs mean clear skins, rested bodies and the overcoming of any tendency to high blood pressure. Not to mention expenses reduced with health induced by the right fish and egg dishes.

Broiled smelts—and smelts we have now with us—with salad, steamed carrots, parsley, potatoes and apple pie make a well balanced meal at small expense. Another good combination is baked oysters with celery, cabbage cole slaw and an orange shortcake.

A lunch of a sardine, radish-stuffed egg and lettuce salad, toasted graham bread and butter and ginger ale insures a brilliant afternoon's work for the business man or woman. Or the eggs may be poached with a vegetable plain.

For the more substantial fish meal try baked bluefish, cod or haddock with tomato stuffing and a savory sauce.

Salt fish is one of the best appetizers, especially smoked salmon broiled or in thin sauce, and finnan haddie steamed, baked in milk or in Newburg are both delicious.

Spanish omelet with buttered toast, dressed lettuce and hot gingerbread make a meal not to be sneezed at.

Baked scallops or oysters—1 quart cooked-size scallops or large oysters, 1½ cups fine dry bread crumbs, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup melted butter.

Combine the crumbs, seasonings and butter. Roll the scallops in this, place in a buttered baking dish that can be sent to the table and bake about fifteen minutes. Garnish with quartered lemons, parsley or cress, tiny radishes or pickled carrots.

In preparing the oysters leave them on the half-shell, dust with the crumb mixture and bake ten minutes in a hot oven. Serve with sliced lemon and a garnish of celery curls.

Halibut or white fish croquettes—2 cups minced boiled halibut or white fish, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-3 cup flour, 1 cup scalded milk, few drops of onion juice, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon white pepper, 1½ teaspoons minced parsley, 2 tablespoons green pepper minced, 1 egg.

Melt the butter, add the flour and gradually the milk. Season, stir in the fish, egg yolk and green pepper and chill. Make into balls containing one tablespoon each. Roll in sifted fine, dry bread crumbs, then in the egg white slightly beaten and diluted with one-fourth cup milk. Roll in crumbs again and fry in deep fat hot enough to brown a bit of bread in a minute.

Baked poached egg—Poach the eggs very soft and slip onto squares of freshly made crustless toast which have been placed on a stout platter. Sprinkle salt and white pepper over the eggs, and surround with a well-seasoned white sauce. Sprinkle lightly with grated cheese and finely chopped parsley, and bake a very delicate brown in a quick oven—450 degrees Farenheit.

For perfectly shaped poached eggs, butter muffin rings and place them in a buttered frying pan filled with boiling water, to which a teaspoonful of salt has been added. Break an egg into each ring, cover tightly, turn out fire and let stand four minutes for soft-poached eggs.

The steam from the cover will baste the eggs so that each yolk will be perfectly covered with a film of white.

Or use an egg poacher which fits in your regular frying pan. As it is impossible to cover the pan tightly when using this device, baste the eggs with the water all the time during cooking.

Portuguese eggs—Chop two small onions fine and cook them in three tablespoonfuls of oil or butter to a light brown, add a cupful of chopped mushrooms, canned or fresh, and two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped ham or tongue.

When the mushrooms have cooked a few moments, pour a cupful of canned tomatoes into the frying pan and add half a teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Then break in four or five eggs and simmer over a gentle fire until the eggs are set.

For the Girl Who Has Trouble in Holding on to Her Friends

By Beatrice Fairfax

"WHY doesn't he call any more?"

Possibly every girl asks herself this question at some time.

She may ask it with bewildered wonder over the seeming loss of a friend or with heartbroken grief.

Misunderstandings come about so easily. And sometimes they are so hurting. Until you find definitely just why he ceased calling, it will be wise to treat him with your usual friendliness when you chance to meet, not permitting the least resentment or condemnation to creep into your thoughts of him.

In time, whatever misunderstanding there may be is likely to clear away, provided you do not add to it by your own jealousy, sensitiveness and wounded vanity.

Perhaps he became interested in another girl, such things do happen. In this case also you will aid your cause best by good humor and generosity. He has a right to the new friendship, provided you and he are not engaged. And if your own charm can stand the test of comparison, he may come back to you with deepened affection.

Madeline returned from a visit to her brother and his wife in the South, wearing an exquisite diamond and sapphire ring, the gift of her brother, who has made a fortune in oil.

Just for fun she slipped it on her engagement finger Christmas evening, when she expected Bob to call. Madeline thought it would be fun to let Bob think for the moment that she was engaged. Bob was such a "poker-face," she longed to see whether she could arouse his jealousy.

He noticed the ring, of course, but made no comment. Nor did he say a word when Madeline came to an end.

"Aren't congratulations in order?" he asked quietly.

"If you like," laughed Madeline.

At this moment a gay crowd of young folks arrived and there was no time for further explanations. Later in the evening when Madeline asked for Bob at the end of a dance she found he had slipped away, leaving his "goodby" with her sister.

Bob didn't call again. He had been in the habit of running in nearly every day when he was home from college, and was Madeline's escort everywhere. Nor did he write when the holidays came to an end.

Had Bob taken her foolish joke seriously, Madeline wondered, worried and puzzled.

They met the following Summer at a country club dance.

"Where is your engagement ring?" Bob asked abruptly as they stopped for a moment to chat.

"Bob, you must have known I was joking at Christmas time," Madeline exclaimed. "I'm not engaged. The ring I wore that night was a gift from my brother."

Madeline is engaged now. But there is not a chance of a misunderstanding about the engagement ring, for Bob, himself, placed it on her left hand, third finger.

Patience and loyalty in the face of a discouraging situation are necessary to help untangle misunderstandings.

Let us hope that in the majority of cases young men continue to call on girls they admire and like and few worrying problems upset the smooth course of friendship and love.

Amusements Amusements Amusements

Ailments of Mankind

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.

MAN, you and I and all of us, bases his kinship in the animal world not only upon the fact that he has the most highly evolved brain but that he is erect.

But it has been said that the law of compensation holds good in all things. If this is true it must follow that we are paying for all that we are getting by virtue of this higher evolution of our form and posture.

There are quite a number of liabilities and ailments that we have acquired that are not experienced by quadrupeds.

Thus it is known that, in learning to walk, the bumps and falls of the child tend to develop conditions that favor the localization of infections in the marrow of the bones—conditions that are known as osteomyelitis and which may be tubercular in character.

By standing we put a large part of our body in direct conflict with the law of gravitation. It gets its revenge, particularly in the weak and unfit, by bent bones and displaced abdominal organs called visceroptosis.

Hernia, a very common affliction of many, is likewise a consequence of our postural defiance of the law of gravitation.

Indigestion, constipation, appendicitis, ulcer of the stomach, epilepsy, and other conditions, may follow as a consequence of this same visceroptosis.

Of course, we could do much that we do not do to evade the results of our continual violation of this natural and unchangeable law. We simply can't change the law itself.

We can systematically train our abdominal muscles to greater strength and relieve them of the load of excessive fat so they can better support the abdominal organs.

We can often break the continuous stress on these organs by sitting or lying for even brief intervals in our usually reckless stand-up occupations.

We can adjust our industries, many of them, at least, measurably to meet these requirements and thus to that degree adjust ourselves to the operation of at least one of the great natural laws, violation of which spells disease and disaster.

Protect the Skin During Winter

By MARIA JERITZA.

EVEN a complexion inclined to be oily in the Summertime may become over-dry when Winter winds begin to blow. For this reason you may find that your skin needs radically different treatment from that which proved so successful during the warm weather.

If your lips chap easily in Winter, and tiny lines form about the corners of your eyes and mouth, you may be sure that cold weather is taking the oil from your skin and leaving it dry and parched. Therefore you will need to use more oil than usual in cleaning your face.

You may like to use a cleansing cold cream at night; then after that is removed, pat in a rich, nourishing skin food to supply oil. Or you may prefer to use just the cleansing cream one night, and the following evening massage your skin with skin food which both cleans and nourishes the skin.

You can tell by experiment just how much oil your skin needs. If cold cream and skin food are too expensive, you cannot do better than apply heated sweet almond oil or heated olive oil to your face and neck at night, removing it with tissue squares or Turkish toweling.

In the morning, dip your washcloth in cold water, softened with a few drops of fresh lemon juice or else a pinch of baking soda, and gently but thoroughly cleanse your face, neck and ears. Use an upward stroke with your washcloth, otherwise you may pull down the delicate muscles of your face, neck and chin.

Finally, dip your hands in the cold, soft water and pat your face and under your chin until the skin glows. Wipe it gently.

The Great Lover

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE Great Lover has been in his grave for months. Girls all over the country had framed his picture and hung it in their own particular rooms, and some of them cried a little to think that they never would see him make beautiful love again or be able to read in the papers that he was going to marry another beautiful girl and give her pearls and diamonds and emeralds.

But most of the girls haven't mourned very much for the Great Lover. They found out that he wasn't really a Great Lover at all. He was just a plain, simple-hearted, kindly fellow with a handsome face and a pair of liquid black eyes that said all kinds of mysterious things.

But he wasn't mysterious at all. He liked dogs and he liked children; but most of all he loved little babies. He always liked to hold a baby in his arms, and the baby always liked to be held by him. He wanted a home, just a quiet home where he could wear his old clothes and smoke, where he could whistle and sing and drum on the piano and go out into the kitchen to make the sauce for the macaroni, and dress the salad in the way he liked best.

"Oh," said one of the girls, "he wasn't even a man of the world. He had the ideals of an European peasant—home and children and that sort of thing. How he fooled us all—isn't it a joke?"

Somehow it seemed to me it was rather a joke, but the joke was not entirely on the Great Lover. It seemed to me that the European peasant ideal was rather amusing. What higher ideal would the girl want a self-respecting man to have? The European peasant and his ideal have rather the best of it, when you come to that.

Doesn't the American man want a wife and a home and children? Most of the men I know live for nothing else in the world but to make homes for their own wives and children.

This Day in Our History

ON January 14, 1639, occurred the adoption of the first written constitution known to the history of the world. This event took place at Hartford, Ct., and was the first formal Republic made up of the people of three early towns in the valley.

The Love Wrecker by BEATRICE BURTON Author of "Gilded Kisses"

Thrilling Romance of Youth in Boston

CHAPTER XXXIX

"I CAME to ask you a question," Honey Lou said to Angela. "Jack's mother gave me a terrible taking over last night about those things I bought the day before I was married—You remember? Those slippers and things?"

Angela nodded. All the anger had faded out of her face now, and she was gentle-looking once more.

"Yes, I remember," she answered, "but how did she find out about them? I'm sure I never mentioned them to her."

"The bill came to her instead of to me," explained Honey Lou, "and she threw a fit over it. But the worst of it was that she's found out how much I spent on my furniture! Did you tell her anything about it?"

Angela started to shake her head. Then suddenly she nodded slowly, and a flush spread slowly over her pearly whiteness.

She put out one of her cool, slender hands and laid it on Honey Lou's shoulder.

"I'm afraid I did," she confessed, "but I didn't mean to stir up any trouble for you, Honey. I just told her about some of the lovely things you'd bought—that bedspread of Chinese embroidery, and your set of Minton china—"

"Jiminy! I wish you hadn't!" Honey Lou interrupted her with a shake of her head. "I suppose I'll hear about it now, all the rest of my natural life."

Angela gazed at her unhappily. "Darling, I'm sorry," she sighed, running a silver-topped comb through her yellow hair. "I'll try to fix it up with her in some way. I'll tell her it was my fault—that I made you buy good things that would last a long time."

"You may as well save your breath to cool your soup," the other girl answered. "It's all over, anyway.—She and I hardly speak now, but brides and mothers-in-law never did get along very well, did they? So let's forget it."

"Let's," Angela agreed. "Let's talk about something pleasant. I want to have a party for you and Jack next week. How's Saturday night for you?"

"First night in the week," cried Honey Lou, her deep brown eyes dancing like sunlit water. She was like a child at the mere thought of a party. There had been so few of them in her life so far.

Jack was at home when she climbed to the top of the three flights of stairs. He was in his smoking jacket, and he sprawled lazily in a long chair with a book in his hand.

"What are you reading?" Honey Lou asked, and gave him a kiss that was all silky fur and fresh violets and perfumed warmth. The kiss she laid on his cheek was like a rose-petal brushing it.

But for once Jack did not respond to the magic of her sweet human contact.

He kept his eyes on the tattered brown book that he held in his hands, and answered her question with a single word: "Poetry."

"It's just some old stuff I've cut out of magazines from time to time," he went on in a shame-faced way. "Most men are ashamed of reading and liking anything but newspapers.

"I was just looking at this one," he said with his finger on a bit of verse. "It used to be my idea of the kind of home I'd have when I was married—"

Honey Lou perched on the arm of his chair, and began to read it: "Come to our house any week-end in June,

When the dandelions riot in the grass . . .

Open the easy-swinging gate and pass

Beneath the birch—"

She stopped and blinked. Not a word about fourth-floor flats or Chinese bedspreads, or floor pillows at twenty dollars apiece!

She stopped reading, and knelt down on a big heart-shape floor pillow at his feet.

"But I'd like to live like that, too," she said. "I'd like nothing better than doing all my own work in a little house, somewhere near town! Just three or four rooms with plain furniture and little white curtains in the windows—I'd love it!"

He laughed. "You, Honey Lou!—You live in a little house out in the country? Why, you'd die! Where have you spent your day, today, just for fun?"

She tried to remember. She had been at the beauty shop part of the afternoon, and shopping with Suzanne and Daisy afterward. But where had she spent the morning? Oh, yes, in bed with a new novel. A good story, too, about a shop girl who had been left a million dollars by an old great-uncle in India.

Jack laughed again when she told him about it. "There, you see!" he said, "that's the kind of life you like."

"But it's you who make me lead that kind of life!" Honey Lou rapped out. "I wanted a house when we were first married, and I wanted to do my own cooking and cleaning, and you wouldn't let me. You made me hire Mary! And now you hate the way you live." She was on the brink of tears.

"No, I don't. I like it fine, only it costs so much," Jack said. "And anyway, we've got to stay here where we can be near my Dad. Angela says he had a dizzy spell when she was driving him down to the factory this morning. He hasn't been well for months."

It was on the tip of Honey Lou's tongue to ask him where he had seen Angela, when he spoke once more:

"The little house in the country is just dream, Honey Lou. Forget it. I'd probably be just as homesick away from town as you'd be. I'm a grouch. Don't pay any attention to me, tonight."

But Honey Lou could not forget what he had said. She thought about it when she lay beside him that night, in the midnight darkness.

"Perhaps I'm losing him the way Suzanne lost her husband!" she thought miserably. "I'll let Mary go first thing in the morning, and do my own work like an old-fashioned wife.

"I'll go right down to my mother, and take a course in cooking from her, by diggety-dog!"

But the next morning at nine o'clock Angela was on the telephone. Mary told Honey Lou so, when she shook her to wakes her and set the breakfast tray on the bedside table.

"I want you to go downtown with me, to help me pick out a new dress for this party I'm going to give for you and Jack," she said. "And I have something to tell you—something else, too, Jack that I forgot to tell you last night. I'll call for you in my car in half an hour."

"Oh, well," thought Honey Lou, hanging up the receiver, "I can let Mary prepare breakfast of today. Plenty of time to begin the good work!"

An hour later she and Angela were in a Boston shop.

"I thought I'd get a black velvet dress for a change," Angela told the red-headed saleswoman who had sold Honey Lou her wedding slippers. "Wouldn't you, Honey Lou?"

But Honey Lou had darted across the shop to a rack where a pink dress, all sparkling with pink spangles hung.

Her eyes were bright and her cheeks scarlet with sudden excitement as she beckoned Angela to her.

"Isn't that the loveliest dress you ever saw?" she asked breathlessly. "It is my size, too—and, but I'd love to have it for your party! Would you buy it? It's only seventy-five dollars. Oh, I don't dare!"

"Of course, I'd buy it. That's an awfully pretty new stenographer you've got at the desk, Angela," Angela drawled. "That's what I wanted to talk to you about this morning."

A Flower Is a Girl, and His Girl Is a Flower

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

WHO knows what a flower is? A lovely thing that was blessed on the old brown earth, was sown from a mystery, shines for a while—an earthly star—and then vanishes again into mystery.

Poets, lovers and other humble people who love and SEE them, have called them "children of the meadows," "the progeny of Spring," "souls of the wind, and rain, and sun," "spirits of lovely, dead women."

Still we do not seem to have told anybody any more than they, what these lovely things that enamel the woods and fields, that intrigue children and old people alike, can be!

The Lover, however, firmly thinks HE knows! A flower is a girl—and his girl is a flower! There is no doubt about that.

you'd like to clear before he comes."

"Thanks, Pen. No I'll not sneak out."

She put her desk in order, however, rather wistfully. Then she went calmly on with her work.

Baird sent for her toward evening. He was hunched in his chair and his face was terrible.

"I've a thing to say to you," he began in a cold fury. Enough—if I know your sort. The day my son marries you—or anyone—against me, wish he is cut off without a nickel. His allowance stops—it's been sizable as you probably have guessed. He'll have no part of my estate. He ceases, in fact, to be my son—is that quite clear?"

She smiled at him, not at all a defiant smile. Indeed a radiance dyed her face, shone from her eyes.

"It's quite clear, Mr. Baird. May I thank you? It is the kindest thing you've ever done for him. He's known already what he's made of himself—an earthly star—and then vanishes again into mystery.

Now he'll have to go on, won't he?

"You—I'm sorry—you don't know my sort. You see you're making me very happy. This is what I've wanted most of all—the chance to help him."

"Brave words!" he snarled. "You'll help I'm! As you've been doing. Help him lose his life!"

"No, Mr. Baird. Help him find his life. Help him understand what life is for—most of all, his destiny. Your money would have held him back . . . I'm sorry you don't like me. Is it because—well, that night at the roadhouse?

"I want you to find someone who will love you. You don't believe me. Oh, yes—well, some day . . .

"I'll go now. No use waiting until Saturday. I know you love Stanley and very white beaches and palms and yachts and islands and beautiful girls in lovely bathing costumes.

She would look them over, carefully, as if making a most important decision. Then she would write in a little book, making note of railway fares and hotel rates and the names of interesting points about Palm Beach or Santa Barbara or Bermuda.

But when she was congratulated on the wonderful trip she was going to take she only shook her head and said she wasn't going anywhere.

"I'm just an armchair traveller," she explained.

"Couldn't afford a trip South if I wanted to go—and I don't really know that I would! Lots of inconveniences about travelling.

"Look at that now." And she held up one of the folders. "Ever see an ocean as bright and blue? Or grass so green or people so smiling and happy as those in the . . . ure? Makes me glad just to look at it."

"Lot of opportunity in that am chair traveling, let me tell you. You may spend today in Palm Beach, say, bathe as you please and tomorrow you may jump over to San Diego for a few hours! All right in your hands, as you might easily with a little forethought. Just surround . . .

"The boy waved jauntily. "Do you care?"

"You know I don't. Well—you know it's what I wanted." She was jubilant again, feeling herself all right, all joy.

"That's all right then. Tell you a secret; I sent word to Steve Conners. The book, you know. Got my job clinched. Clever. I'll say. Honest truth is I wasn't strong for quadrangle . . .

"Wonderful—" She jumped up, kissed the top of his head. He caught her, pulled her down.

"No—oh, they'll see! Well—"

Stan and Gay go on their honeymoon. Tomorrow's instalment is brimming with romance.

Traveling Far in an Arm Chair

By LUCY LOWELL

DUN-COLORED Autumn on the fields, on the hills, on the world.

Trees that had been so gay and green all stark now, stripped of their brightness, and a cold, cold wind coming down the river, which seemed black and angry under the lowering sky.

But the little old lady sat in her window—it looked out over her garden and there are spruce trees there and arbor vitae—and smiled. How she did smile!

Though it wasn't the dun colored world nor yet the everyness that pleased her so. It was railroad folders—spread all around her.

Folders painted with blue creams and very white beaches and palms and yachts and islands and beautiful girls in lovely bathing costumes.

She would look them over, carefully, as if making a most important decision. Then she would write in a little book, making note of railway fares and hotel rates and the names of interesting points about Palm Beach or Santa Barbara or Bermuda.

But when she was congratulated on the wonderful trip she was going to take she only shook her head and said she wasn't going anywhere.

'The Making of a Husband'---By Ann Lisle

"SAY 'engaged to another'—please," Ralph urged.

"I mustn't be. You mustn't think of me that way."

"But isn't that how it is with us? Why not be honest? Why not face things? I've always loved you. I've always had to pretend that I'm your friend. But now that your marriage is so much over as it will be the day Jim gets his decree why not be honest enough to acknowledge that we are going to pool together the bits of shattered romance and find how much of real happiness you can find in accepting the love that has always been here for you? I'm not asking you to think of marrying me is growing more repugnant to you as it becomes more possible and comes nearer."

"It isn't that, Ralph," I protested.

"What is it then?"

"You are a right to go much more than I have to give. You've a right to a love that will match your own—clear—unafraid—love that is sure of itself—that does not have to be wooed and coaxed—love that won't elude you—or cloud your offerings by ugly memories," I said breathlessly, my mind intent on what I had told me about Judy and her young devotion to Ralph.

"I want what you have to give, Ralph said tenderly.

"But more—"

"Rather less from you than all the world full of love from any other woman." he declared sturdily.

"It isn't fair! If there were someone else who—cared—it would not be fair to her either. You would both be cheated—and perhaps for me you would never be more than a haven—after all life storms."

"That's enough for me. And you've a right to all I have to give, whether or not you take it all. It will stay at interest for you, dear. It's yours."

I accepted his loving decree then. I forgot that tomorrow I must face Jean-e and her uncompromising and brutal honesty.

Ralph Lacy and I drove out to Dreamwold in the "Selfish Roadster" which he had bought for the express purpose of having me as the only passenger. The country was gay in its early Autumn coloring, and the bracing morning air made the trip an exhilarating affair. I was tricked out in a new coat and dress of the soft warm green that is so popular this Fall, and I gazed out at the world from under the brim of my little green velour hat with a sense of peace and happiness such as I have not experienced for a long time.

"That's a stunning rig," Ralph commented approvingly as we rolled along over the smooth road. Then as he pulled up at a florist's he added "Needs a shoulder knot of soft red dahlias to set it off. I'm going to keep you supplied with shoulder knots—true lovers' knots. I hope you'll like them and wear my devotive offering as happily as I going to order it for you. And wax lots of green. It's a perfect setting for you. Makes you look like a spirit of sea and forest."

"Don't spoil me," I laughed.

But within myself I felt great comforted because I had found a new color, even if there was a new title to take the place of Jim-e "Lilac Princess." I had forgotten that green was Arielle's color and that I had always ed her to a dryad, but that came home to me a little later when we arrived at Jeanie's. There we found Betty and Mrs. Winston sitting with Jeanie in the little Summer house at foot of the path that leads to the pond. They were all wearing pretty morning clothes of a summery sort that went with the warmth of the Indian summer day. It was evident even before a word of greeting was spoken that Judy and Betty must be house guests for the week-end.

"Why didn't you leave the hat and coat up at the house?" Jeanie asked after our preliminary how-do-es. "They look awfully formal though I don't blame you for holding on to such a becoming co . . .

"You look like a wood-nymph—a dryad!" Judy said, with her grave yet eager sweetness.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

As a constant reader of your column, I am writing in the hope of obtaining some advice between a man and a woman.

A gave a joint meeting with a lady . . . and both . . . I . . . the man's arm.

C says neither one should hold each other's arm.

In this part . . . was the lady and gentleman hate been very good friends for a year and a half.

READER.

C IS correct. A gentleman should not . . . like a lady's arm. And it is not good form or good taste for a lady to take a gentleman's arm except in the case . . . where a lady is . . . to be helped over . . . walk . . . or . . . to be helped . . . ding, and so forth.

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN:

I . . . a person through a man whose acquaintance I made six months ago . . . a wedding ceremony and party for Him. Although I do see him . . . only . . . I expressed my appreciation . . . by thanking him . . . but also through a letter.

Was I right or wrong by sending him a letter also? E. R

YOUR intuition was entirely correct. I wish that more people had your sense of the fitness of expressing appreciation. Most people are so casual about saying thank-you. You, on the other hand, made a point of doing . . . letting your thanks be . . . and I am sure that this kind . . . appreciated your sure taste.

READER.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Would it be a social blunder for your child to invite two children to his party that he has not yet met? The fathers are good friends and the mothers are about to be introduced.

Do you think this a fair way to bring the children together?

READER.

INDEED this would not be a social blunder, and it is a delightful way of having children know each other. One social procedure I strongly suggest in any situation of this kind—and many of them come to a mother of young and just-like-children—is for the mother to have all invitations . . . to her child's party . . . recite to the other mother. Mothers are . . . by other mothers very severely for omissions of this procedure. It is the mother of the child who is to be the guest, the mother who is to be introduced to the party, should write a note of invitation, asking that her child come to the party.

IN DESPAIR OVER PIMPLY, RED SKIN
ITCHED AND BURNED—UGLY TO LOOK AT
Healed at last, quickly and easily
Charlotte, Mich., Oct. 21:—"I have been a sufferer from a most unsightly skin disorder, my face being full of pimples and blackheads and my complexion was very muddy. It was very ugly to look at as it was red and fiery and it annoyed me by itching and burning. I tried many treatments, but got no relief. When I was a small baby I had eczema on my body and my mother used Resinol Ointment on it and she recommended it to me at this time. In desperation I decided to send for a sample of Resinol. After using the sample I bought more Resinol as I was convinced it was a splendid remedy. After I had applied it four times, the pimples began to heal and at the end of two weeks they had entirely disappeared. Now, I have such confidence in Resinol Ointment I would not be without it." Stop a Little Cold and there IS no Big Cold
SOME day scientists will know the cause of colds; but until that day comes we are sure of one thing: "To avoid a BIG cold stop a little one."
For all colds, little or big, the following treatment has been found effective in millions of cases: (1) A day's rest. (2) A laxative. (3) A light diet. (4) Vicks rubbed on throat and chest.
Vicks medicated vapors, released by the body heat, are inhaled direct to the air passages; at the same time Vicks acts like a poultice, drawing out the soreness and pain.
Use this treatment at the first sign of every little cold and big colds will be almost unknown to you.

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE WORM TURNS

By M. I. Henke

THE sleek-haired youth with the girl on his arm trod on Mr. Canby's foot, said "Sorry," unconvincingly, and went on. It was the fifth time Canby's feet had been trodden on that day. The world, thought Mr. Canby, seemed to have reached the conclusion that his feet were made to be walked upon, and Mr. Canby had decided that if one more person walked on his feet, the offender would pay a heavy penalty.

As one of the offenders he didn't know. They had just stepped on [illegible] and gone on, unconscious that [illegible] were paving the way to revolution. But the two other offenders had stepped on him before—a great many times before.

The latter were his boss and the girl he meant to marry. If ever he made up her mind to give up everything for him. The everyone [illegible] had been [illegible] till they're finished [illegible] turn out the light when they [illegible]

Just his luck on a [illegible] he had promised to take Grace [illegible] dances, to the [illegible] had to tell old Fallon a thing or two, [illegible] he needed his pay envelope on Saturday. He quelled his indignation, rolled up his [illegible] pilloried into the [illegible] and [illegible] Grace. [illegible] he feared [illegible] locked up to discover Grace [illegible] in rose and silver, and framed in the office doorway.

"Oh, Ben," she exclaimed, "do let me off, that's a dear. Mr. Carroll is coming. That awfully nice young man my brother knew in college. I meant to tell you today that I'm going out with him."

Canby sneered: "Sure, run along." But now his revolt flamed. She blew him a kiss and dashed streetward.

Canby had spent a great deal of money on those theatre tickets, but what did Grace care? He laughed a short hysterical laugh. Should he waste these two perfectly good seats at Lee Shore? he asked himself. He should not! Slowly a plan formulated in his angry mind. He would take another girl to the theatre—he would—but whom would he take? That seemed the question, for when a fellow gives all of his devotion to one damsel he sometimes finds it difficult to ask another and especially in the very short space of time now left for the execution of Mr. Canby's rather hazy plan.

Suddenly out of the mass of [illegible] Canby's brain [illegible] loomed. He had waited [illegible] for many days and nights at their boarding house—had [illegible] her—a drab young girl, obviously lonesome in her city surroundings. She was the very girl—yes, he would rush home in the hope of catching her. She was the one he would ask to accompany him to the theatre tonight.

He took a taxi and found Emily sitting in the parlor politely listening to an old lady giving a recital of her surgical operation. Mr. Canby called the girl into the hall.

"Come on and go to the theatre with me," he said. "We haven't much time, so don't waste any primping!"

The girl blushed and hesitated at first. Then she smiled and went scampering up the stairs like a happy child. In an incredibly short time she came downstairs, wearing a pretty little gown of pale green with a black velvet evening cloak on her arm. Mr. Canby stared at her in some surprise. He had never realized that she was pretty.

Emily enjoyed the play with the enthusiasm of a girl starved for amusement. Mr. Canby enjoyed it too until he discovered that Grace [illegible] It all was [illegible] [illegible] at him as if she couldn't believe her eyes. Emily kept turning to him and smiling. He wished now that she weren't quite so pretty. It made things sort of difficult.

But after all he had set out to show the girl a good time, and he meant to "carry on." He took her into a fashionable restaurant for supper and discovered that Grace and her escort were there before him. This time Grace did not look at him. An ominous sign.

When they dismissed their cab at the boarding house, Emily said gratefully: "You don't know how much I thank you, Mr. Canby! I've been so very, very happy."

"I've enjoyed it, too," he answered. "We mustn't let it end with this, though. How about going somewhere to dance tomorrow evening?"

"I'd love to," she murmured.

He had let himself in for it now, he reflected, as he undressed. It hadn't been necessary to ask her again, but, somehow, he wanted to. He had just begun to know her. She was so much more charming and lovely than he had supposed. He didn't want to lose her now that he'd found her.

Grace did not speak to him when he entered the office next morning, but towards noon she thawed sufficiently to say, "I don't suppose you have any explanation to make?"

"No," Canby answered quietly. "Except this—that I'm tired of being a worm. You've never taken the trouble to be polite to me. You've snubbed me and walked on me because you thought I'd always be there, waiting like a little lamb, when you wanted me. Well, maybe I will—and maybe I won't."

Grace drew herself up. "After this," she said, "there can be no question of an engagement between us."

"I'm sorry," he said. But really he wasn't. He had discovered suddenly that he did not want Grace at all.

As he was preparing to leave the office that evening Mr. Fallon called him. "Oh, Canby, Burns left some work that needs checking up. Go over it, won't you?"

"No, I won't," Canby declared politely. "I've got a date."

He walked out at a natural gait and closed the door before the boss could reply.

Emily proved to be a graceful dancer. Canby did not dance so well, and in the ecstasy of a waltz, he lost step just long enough for her dainty foot to come down on his broad, wide shoe.

"Oh," she gasped, "I stepped on your foot. I'm so sorry!"

"That's all right," he assured her, "I like it."

And somehow, this time he really did.

MEDBURY SAYS--

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

MEDICAL science has figured that there are over four hundred ways to commit suicide. One despondent fellow is broken hearted because he can't try them all.

NO matter how quick the methods might be, it would keep him busy all day killing himself.

HE was going to commit suicide the other morning but he changed his mind. He wanted to have something to do in the afternoon.

HE wasn't afraid of dying but he didn't know where to have his mail forwarded.

ANOTHER thing that kept him waiting was that he couldn't decide whether to blow his own brains out or move to Chicago.

BESIDES, there were several other boarders in the house, and he didn't want to wait in line.

HE would have liked to have assassinated himself, but the landlady was so nice he hated to run up her gas bill.

HE thought of drinking poison, but the bootleggers were asking too much for it.

IF he paid eight dollars for Scotch and twenty-five cents for a bottle of ginger ale he'd have to die a pauper.

HE figured it was a waste of money when he could jump off Bunker Hill Monument for nothing.

HIS wife told him the other day that she wished he was dead.

so he's staying alive to spite her.

HE'S living for meanness.

SHE made him so sore that he's decided to live indefinitely, even if it takes him the rest of his life.

HE says he's going to stay alive if it kills him.

TWO years ago he tried to starve himself to death, and he would have succeeded if he hadn't gotten hungry.

HE took a little bite and then one meal led to another.

HE was going to kill himself on the spot, but he couldn't decide upon the spot.

IT'S wonderful to have a list of four hundred ways to commit suicide, but after you try six or seven of them, the novelty soon wears off.

A neighbor called to inquire after the health of a man whose wife had been very ill. The man was at work with saw and hammer in his woodshed. "How is she," asked the neighbor. The husband's reply was drowned by a sound of coughing inside the house.

"Is that her coughing?" asked the neighbor. "No," said the husband, continuing to saw, "It's a ben house.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS---BY HELEN ROWLAND

GO to, my Daughter. What is the smallest form of Human Life?

Behold, it is the CYNIC!

For, lo, a cheater may play with marked cards, and a grafter may borrow thy moneys; but a Cynic stealeth thine allusions and robbeth thee of thy vanity. When thy cup of joy is full he is always at hand to jog thine elbow?

Yea, he seeketh to magnify himself by belittling all others.

He weareth a ribbon upon his eyeglass and an ingrowing sneer upon his lips. He looketh down upon the world as from a Great Height.

He puffeth up with false wisdom and filled with bitter quotations—from Bartlett.

Unto him, all things beautiful are "childish," and all things noble are foolish. All love is but "glorified sex appeal," and all romance is "the bunk!"

Yea, in his eye, all women are of but two varieties:

Those who fill him with boredom—and those who fill him with appleasauce.

Those whom he calleth "gold digger"—and those whom he calleth "dumbbells."

Those who are husband hunters—and those who are passing amusements.

Those who "pet" and are frivolous—and those who think and are "poisonous."

Those who ought to be kissed—and those who INSIST upon being kissed.

And in all the world, he defyeth Diogenes or any man to find a woman who is both honest and interesting!

Verily, verily, she that wedleth one of these pronounceth her own Life Sentence!

But be of good cheer, my Daughter. For the Cynic seldom weddeth; he is too busy being FUNNY!

Yea, he would rather be "funny" than right, and "snappy" than bank president! He is always there with the "clever come-back and the barbed shaft!

And NO thing is too sacred, or too holy or too delicate to escape his "scintillating wit."

And lo, the Bromides gather around him and sing praises and paeans to his wise-cracks. And the flat-heads and dim-wits repeat his platitudes one to another.

And he saith in his heart, "Behold, I have ARRIVED! All praise to the great god, BLAH! for verily, verily, I have got them going!"

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

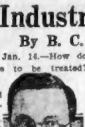
Workers Give Views on Industrial Leadership

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—How do the workers like to be treated? Answers to that question, recently asked in this column, are pouring in.

One point emphasized is that too many foremen and other bosses have never received training to understand human nature and to fit them to handle men.



B. C. Forbes

This subject of such importance to industry, to business, to workers and to all the rest of us was opened up by Thomas B. Fordham, works manager of the Edison Light Company, following some comments on labor relationships made by the writer. An insight into the minds of rank-and-file workers can be obtained by reading these extracts from workers' letters.

A WORKER employed in the General Electric Company's plant at West Lynn, Mass., in course of a long letter says:

"I am first a believer in and advocate of employe and management co-operation. This can be attained only if each has a complete understanding of the viewpoint of the other, a policy of frankness on the part of employe and management alike.

"A plan of employe representation, is in my opinion, the first step in this direction.

"Workers are willing to follow the leader type of foreman. But don't forget that some workers have the quality of leadership themselves and a plan of representation is the medium through which this quality can be brought to the surface.

"It has always seemed to me that in training executives for modern industry the beaten path is followed. For example, in schools and colleges the student is grounded thoroughly in the technical and business theory of his future job, but how much effort is put forth to give him the same foundation on the human side of his job?

"If we agree that the art of dealing with men is essential to the modern industrial executive, why not pay more attention to this part of his training? This applies to apprentice courses and foreman training programs as well as to schools and colleges.

"Paternalism in any form is abhorrent to the worker, but many activities which are interpreted as paternalism by him, and are of great benefit to him and his family, can be presented in the spirit in which they are provided if his representatives have a part in their promotion.

"The question of a steady job is the bugaboo of every worker today. This is the most important problem facing us, and is certainly second to the hands of 'big business.' It is up to them to solve it. I am sure the workers will co-operate if they lead the way."

A WASHINGTON, D. C., waiter writes:

"Your column says exactly what I have tried to make my superior understand for years, without result.

AFTER ALL, does not the future of this nation depend in no small measure upon whether the majority of our 42,000,000 workers can or cannot be given reasonably satisfying wages and working conditions?"

Stand by the President in His Defense of Our Rights

President Coolidge has explained his Nicaraguan policy in a message to the Congress and the people, full of common sense, vigor, Americanism and sound logic. There has been no answer to the facts marshalled by the President.

He proves that President Diaz, whom we support, was elected by forty-four votes of the sixty-seven members of Nicaragua's Congress.

He proves that, in supporting Diaz, we are following long established United States policy, maintained for the benefit of the Central American States themselves. That policy is to discourage the habit of substituting bullets for ballots in choosing governments.

He proves that European nations, forbiddden by the Monroe doctrine from protecting their citizens from violence in Nicaragua, are asking us to protect them.

He proves that the rights of the United States to the Nicaraguan Canal route will be imperilled by the overthrow of the Nicaraguan Government.

He proves that American citizens and American interests, invited to develop Nicaragua, are threatened with injury or destruction by the growth of revolutionary lawlessness there. For us to protect our citizens and property under such circumstances is to perform the duty of any first-class, self-respecting government.

There is no reason why a crisis or a war should develop between the United States and Mexico. If any Mexican official winked at gun-running from Mexico to the Scoase revolutionists, President Coolidge's warning should stop the practice.

The present Mexican Government and its friends should be the last to oppose our support of established government against the forces of revolution and disorder.

The present Mexican Government owes its EXISTENCE to the fact that two years ago we stood by it just as we are now standing by Diaz.

In 1924, when the Adolfo de la Huerta revolution was sweeping Mexico, the Obregon-Calles government besought Washington for help. They got it. President Coolidge came out for the Obregon-Calles faction. He enforced an arms embargo that deprived De la Huerta of all supplies. Then President Coolidge "loaned" Obregon and Calles a large supply of arms and ammunition out of our army arsenals.

Finally, President Coolidge did the unprecedented thing of allowing Obregon's Yaqui soldiers to be transported on American railroads from the west coast of Mexico to the east coast to meet the victorious rebel forces.

President Coolidge broke the De la Huerta revolution. His avowed reason was the same that now actuates him in dealing with Nicaragua. He said that the United States was not going to see violence take the place of popular election in establishing a government in Mexico.

If President Coolidge had pursued the hands-off policy in Mexico which Mexico wants him to pursue in Nicaragua, Adolfo de la Huerta would probably now be President in Mexico City, instead of being a refugee in Los Angeles.

We are not going to break with Mexico. It is inconceivable that President Calles will break with us for maintaining the very policy to which he owes his position and his security.

No patriotic American who knows the facts will fail to support President Coolidge whole-heartedly.

Keep Faith With Veterans

Bill Which Congresswoman Rogers of Massachusetts Sponsors Should Be Speedily Passed

If a veteran of the Great War cannot negotiate a loan at his bank on his adjusted compensation certificate, as the law which gave him that certificate authorizes, then his Government at Washington should be authorized by law to make the loan to him on the same terms out of its life (converted) insurance fund.

A bill giving the Government this authority has just been introduced in Congress—in the Senate by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas (Dem.), and in the House by Mrs. Rogers, of Massachusetts (Rep.).

Justice to the holders of adjusted compensation certificates demands that Congress pass the Robinson-Rogers bill without delay. So does the honor of the Government, whose good faith is at stake.

Many veterans have suffered a bitter humiliation since January 3 last. That was the date on which, according to their adjusted compensation certificates, they would be able to borrow money from the bank by offering these certificates as collateral.

What has happened? Out of twenty-eight thousand banks in this country only four thousand two hundred, between January 3 and January 10, had signified their willingness to accept adjusted compensation certificates as security for loans to veterans in accord with the terms of the adjusted compensation act.

Meantime, and regardless of what a majority of the country's twenty-eight thousand banking institutions do, Congress should not let another week go by without passing the Robinson-Rogers bill.

Let Congress enact the Robinson-Rogers bill into law. Then no holder of an adjusted compensation certificate can truthfully say that Uncle Sam has not kept faith with the veterans of the Great War.

BLANKET PART THAT KEEPS YOU WARM

By DR. FRANK CRANE

It is the part of the blanket that hangs over the edge that keeps you warm.

If you crawled into bed on a cold Winter's night and found yourself lying like a hot dog between the two halves of the bun, with your covers extending flat and rigid and unbending above and below, you would freeze to death.

It is because the soft woolen covers snuggle close to your body and hang down over the edge that they keep you warm.

There is an A No. 1 lesson to be seen in the part of the covers that hang over the edge.

To a practical, economical, ignorant eye that part seems to be a total loss.

Only the part over the top of the sleeper seems to be doing much to keep him warm.

So in life some of the best investments seem total wastes to economical, practical and ignorant eyes.

Spending money upon self-improvement is a coverlet hanging over the edge. The same money put into bonds or real estate might bring in quicker, more easily recognized returns, but the final results invariably demonstrate the wisdom of investing in sincere attempts in self-development.

Buying books seems to be something that can be dispensed with in cutting down expenses, but they are often the source of growth that leads to increased earning capacity.

Trying to save by eating second-rate food may seem a saving at the time, but it is cutting off the valuable part of the quilt that hangs over, and time (bringing cold weather—in the form of ill health) will demonstrate the blunder.

Cutting off the coverlet many times seems to be a wise step in economy for the moment.

Time always demonstrates the fallacy.

"Given under my hand and seal at CAMBRIDGE this 19th day of March in the fourth year of the reign of George the Third, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith &c, Anno Domini 1764," written in an indelible hand and places in a frame in Sheriff Fairbairn's office in the East Cambridge courthouse. It tells of the commission given to a deputy sheriff in MIDDLESEX that year. The document is one of the curios of other days. It plainly states in the document that George was King of France. Historians deny this assertion, but it is in that document, nevertheless.

LOCK AND KEY

WARDEN HENDRY surprised newspapermen in his office at STATE PRISON by opening a tremendous big safe and hauling therefrom a box of cigars which he passed around. Each reporter had one remarky to take away.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

JOAN WILSON is boy crazy.

Two years ago Joan was a shy, awkward little girl in the last grade of grammar school. Today she is a pert, unruly, highly emotional Young Lady in the Sophomore Year of High School.

And Mother and Dad Wilson are walking the floor nights, wondering what will become of her.

The neighbors don't wonder. They KNOW. They say young Joan is going to the dogs pronto.

"If ever I saw the makings of a thoroughly Bad Girl, it's that Wilson kid," say the wise ones with a knowing sneer.

In spite of her mother's best efforts to dinese her modesty, Joan paints and wears dresses above her kneecaps. She won't work, either at home or in school. She is alternately dreamy and lazy, or feverishly irritable. Her room is shockingly untidy, her clothes are unmended. She is impudent to all older persons, cruelly selfish, conceited, extravagant, bad tempered.

Then between outbursts the old sweet Joan will return, and for a few days she will be loving and considerate, modest and industrious. Then off she goes again on another tantrum.

And always there's a boy on the horizon.

"That's all she really cares for any more—boys," cries poor Mother Wilson. "Elsie, I'm just about frantic. Is my precious little daughter going to become one of those terrible immoral modern girls? We have done everything to bring her up to be a fine, good woman. Where does this terrible strain in her come from? What would you do with a girl like that?"

Look Back in Life

What would you do with a Bad Little Girl?

First I'd look for the Bad Girl in myself.

I'd turn my memory back and back through the years of my womanhood, back to the times when I was ten and twelve, then fifteen. I'd remember the strange, fairy world in which I lived as a tiny child, shut in and waiting like a baby grub in a silken cocoon. A tiny, fat, shy grub curled up in myself. Then the shivery beginning of awakening, the prickling curiosity about the great, strange world of grown-up men and women—the long, like growing pains, to be Grown Up myself—

Until suddenly, as though a big wave had swamped me, the bursting of the cocoon and the beginning of Womanhood.

Seeing boys for the first time — Realizing life for the first time— Growing dizzy and feverish with the wonder and delight of it all—growing shivery and cold with the fear of it all. Happy one day, hurt the next. Lazy, fiercely industrious, gentle, cruel, meek, proud, generous, stingy—being all these things in the space of one day until one's head and heart were whirling with the turmoil of it all.

And all the time being scolded and lectured and called upon to explain myself when I hadn't the slightest idea what it was all about!

And boys!

Thrilled by Boys

Every nerve of me thrilling to Boys—

The wonder of being with boys—

The shame of liking boys—

I loved them! I hated them! I ran to them—and ran from them. Boys like a fever possessed me. I couldn't rid myself of them.

"Boy crazy," that's what they called me, too, and the sneer of it cut me like a lash. For how could I help this craziness which had come upon me? Why couldn't the Grown-Ups trust me instead of hurting me so? Why couldn't they see how bewildered I was — how hungry for love and sympathy —

Oh, why couldn't they understand?

Years later I came to an understanding of it all myself. And then I saw how my ripening young body had unfolded almost over night and how the mating and motherhood instinct had risen within me.

I wasn't a Bad Little Girl. I was only a little girl changing from a child to a woman. But, oh, what dreadful risks they let me run because they didn't understand.

And now your own little girl is changing from a girl to a woman, Mother Wilson. And Boys to her have become an all-engrossing fact because wifehood and motherhood are ripening in her soul. That is the secret wonder that lies back of all her unrest and your torment—just as it lay back of your unrest and mine when you and I were "Bad Little Girls."

If she were my Bad Little Girl, I'd try to remember that.

And I'm sure if I could remember that, and keep remembering it with love and patience and common sense and wit, that the wrong would all come right.

Color Blind People

By Garrett P. Serviss,

"THOUGH color blind, I see all the colors of the birds and flowers and the sky, the sunset, just as you do, but I cannot name the colors. Then, there are different degrees of color blindness. My range is: White, black, yellow and blue; any other color I am unable to name.—F. F."

COLOR BLINDNESS is a rather mysterious subject, still requiring a good deal of investigation. Your statement is interesting as describing the impressions of one who knows himself to be color blind. You say you see all the colors that are visible to a person of normal vision, but that you are unable to "name" any of them except yellow and blue, together with white and black.

This seems to mean that your yellow and blue accord with what everybody calls by those names, while there is no accord between the rest of the colors that you see and those seen by other persons and named red, green, orange, violet, etc. It also indicates, as you say, that "the term color blind is not exactly correct."

Indeed, the phenomenon, as you describe it, is not blindness at all, but only a variance, or difference, of visual impression. When you painted your horse in the picture green, of course, the color to you appeared to be that common to horses—some tone of brownish.

In other words, according to your account, when you look at a spectrum of sunlight you should see as many different colors arranged in a band as anyone else does, only two of these (yellow and blue) being the same as those seen by other people.

But, are you certain that you see as many colors as one who is not color blind sees? To settle that question you might try the experiment that I have just suggested with the spectrum. Normal vision shows seven clearly distinguishable colors in the band, viz: red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet.

Now, looking at a bright spectrum, count the number of different hues that you perceive. Two of them you would at once "name" your familiar yellow and blue; but how about the rest of the band, entirely covered by the spectral band?

Does it appear to you divided into clearly distinguishable spaces of regions, each corresponding to a distinct, though unnamed, color? If it does, then you are right in affirming that you see all the colors that anybody else sees, though only two agree in the impression they make on your sense of vision with that which they make on the sense of others.

Partial color blindness is not a very rare phenomenon, and since it has a great practical importance, in some cases involving public safety, I suggest that those who find themselves affected in this way—and sometimes the affection is only temporary—should not only test themselves by determining how many different color impressions they really perceive and what are their relations with the colors seen by everybody, but also contrive crossteats to ascertain whether the "unnamed" colors, or impressions, perceived by different color-blind persons accord among themselves.
